Farm Family Donates Calf To Help Support Four Diamonds Fund

Duane and Marilyn Hershey and son Robert stand in front of their Cochranville-area farmhouse with Ar-Joy Celsius Lewi-ET, a registered Holstein calf out of one of the best cow families in the breed, that is being offered for sale at the Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale to help raise money for the Four Diamonds Fund.

COCHRANVILLE (Chester Co.) — A dairy farm couple whose young son is being helped in his battle with leukemia through a special non-profit fund is offering to sell "shares" on one of their best calves, before selling it outright at the Nittany Lion Fall Classic for the same purpose, in hopes of generating a substantial donation to the fund.

Duane and Marilyn Hershey, owners of Ar-Joy Holsteins farm near Cochranville, are offering Ar-Joy Celsius Lewi-ET, a registered Holstein calf out of one of the best cow families in the breed, for sale at the Nittany Lion Fall Classic Sale to help raise money for the Four Diamonds Fund.

The Four Diamonds Fund is a children's cancer treatment fund established by the Pennsylvania State University Board of Trustees primarily to help families with children being treated for cancer at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center, in Hershey.

The fund is annually supported by the fraternity and sorority system at Penn State University through a two-day dance marathon. Last year, $1.2 million was raised by Penn State fraternities through the dance marathon to provide 73 percent of the money donated to the Four Diamonds Fund.

The Hersheys have four children, Steve, 10, Kelby, 9, Kacie, 5, and Robert, 6.

It was Robert who two years ago was diagnosed with leukemia, and is still undergoing chemotherapy and treatment at Hershey Medical Center.

According to Marilyn, the first sign of the disease was vague. She said Robert had come down with "the croup," a normal illness among children.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary Holds A Forum At A Pennsylvania Dairy Farm

JUDY PATTON
Union Co. Correspondent

BELLEFONTE (Centre Co.) — With net farm income predicted to the $52 billion and exports worth $60 billion this year, the highest levels ever, U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman said U.S. farmers are generally better off than they have been for a long time.

The secretary attended a farm tour followed by a forum at Paul and Ellen Hartle's Mammouth Spring dairy farm in Centre County on Wednesday in support of Democrat Ruth Rudy's congressional campaign. Glickman called Rudy's bid to win the seat of longtime Republican Rep. William Clinger one of the most crucial in this federal election.

Because Rudy grew up on a dairy farm and has served on the Pennsylvania House Agriculture Committee for 14 years, Glickman believes she is well-qualified to build a bridge of understanding in Congress, where only 15% of the members have any commercial production agriculture in their districts. He said that although Pennsylvnaia is one of the most rural states demographically in the U.S. and probably has the greatest agricultural diversity, it is often missed in the farm debate.

Rudy feels that farming is a "great way of life" even though farmers don't always get much out of it economically, but she says there is a future for the family farm in Pennsylvania.

To help preserve Pennsylvania farms, her proposed "Vision for Leadership" program includes trying to get a fairer share of federal

Small Milking Facilities Can Compete With Calif. 'Miracle Parlors'

ANDY ANDREWS

NORTH CORNWALL (Lebanon Co.) — If dairy producers follow a simple rule when deciding what to spend on their new milking parlors, they can compete with some of the large "miracle parlors" present on large western herds, according to a noted dairy facility engineer.

Dr. Douglas J. Reinemann, department of biological systems engineering at the University of Wisconsin, indicated that if a dairy farmer can build the parlor for 20 percent of gross annual milk sales, the producer can achieve the same returns on investment as the big California herds.

Reinemann spoke to about 75 producers and agri-industry representatives Tuesday morning at the Animal Housing Expo at the Lebanon Fairgrounds.

The good news is, most producers don't have to spend as much on their herds and can achieve the same milking efficiency as the larger parlors.

The dairy engineer found that a "simple and small" double-8 parlor for a 300-600 cow herd with one or two operators will achieve the best cost efficiency and most efficient milking per hundredweight of milk sold.

Reinemann reviewed some of the hard lessons he has learned in talking to many dairy farmers throughout the years. One of the things he has found out is "we have a large number of people investing in facilities and not doing too well," he said.

Reinemann blames this on "overcapitalization in parlors." He reviewed ways dairy farmers can be profitable and competitive when deciding to enlarge the herd and install parlors.

"If we can keep debt under control, it gives us some options when dealing with other risk factors,"

WILLOW VALLEY (Lancaster Co.) — Members of the Lancaster Poultry Association had a lot to celebrate at the annual banquet held Tuesday night at Willow Valley Convention Center. The organization received money from the state and from the industry's fair booth to continue promotion of the poultry industry.

Chris Herr, deputy secretary for the state department of agriculture, presented a check for $8,500. The grant was awarded as part of the new Pennsylvania Agriculture Product Promotion Program, which awards matching grant monies to non-profit organizations for the development of promotional programs for ag products. The funds are earmarked to produce an educational video to be used for Ag in the Classroom.

OCTOBER 31, 1996

Trucklot buying activity was mixed and irregular. Offerings were disproportionate with a wide difference of opinion as to values and available supplies of breast items and leg quarters. Wings were readily available and often noted as difficult to place. Other items were noted as at least adequate for the uneven buyer patterns. Demand was also off-balance with dealers uncertain as to first-of-the month consumer activity. Trade sentiment was unsettled and cautious.

Delmarva Broiler

OCTOBER 31, 1996

Movement of ready-to-cook whole birds increased slightly and was seasonally moderate at most plants. Seller offerings were fully sufficient to handle current requirements. Live supplies and processing schedules were moderate to heavy; weights were mixed in a full range of light to heavy. Less than trucklot asking prices were unchanged at 55 to 69 cents. Trade sentiment was mostly steady. In the parts complex, movement was good on the adequate to closely cleared supply of breast items. Thighs were in short supply. Other leg items were at least adequate, and were slow to clear in instances. Wings were readily available.

Prices were unchanged. The market tone was steady to fully steady. Demand covered the full range, and was mostly moderate with the majority of trades focused on current needs. Frozen product inventories were no more than adequate. Shell egg supplies were about adequate with prices unchanged to higher; increased offerings of shell eggs from hatching channels helped fill needs in the Southeastern area. Edible liquid and frozen eggs (ingredients included) processed under federal inspection the week ending October 19, 1996 in the Eastern region were 1% less than last week, and 9% more than the same week last year.

National Grain Market

ST. JOSEPH, MO
OCTOBER 30, 1996

Wheat bids were lower most places due to limited export demand. However, white wheat sales offered some strength to Portland bids. Corn and soybean bids lower again on harvest pressure, very good yields and slow export demand. Wheat 5 to 7 cents lower except Portland 2 to 3 cents higher. Corn 5 to 7 cents lower. Sorghum 7 to 10 cents lower. Soybeans 7 to 9 cents lower. Wheat bids were mostly lower as export demand this week remain light and indications that many countries are purchasing outside the US, weighed on bids. Harvest remains in full swing for soybeans with the majority of the crop out of the ground and in farmers bins. Plenty of corn, however, is still standing in fields. Export sales have been good for corn so far this week, but no sales of beans are on the books. The OLD FARMER'S THIS WEEK WITH ALMANAC

NOVEMBER 4-10, 1996

NEW MOON, NOV. 10.

ELECTION DAY

Ogden Nash put it in well-rhymed verse in "Election Day is a Holiday" when he said, "They have such refined and delicate palates/That they can discover no one worthy of their ballots/And then when someone terrible gets elected/They say, 'There, that's just what I expected!'" So what are you expecting? We hear a lot about voting for the lesser of two evils, or having no choice at the ballot box But wouldn't it be better to offer a write-in candidate or make the best choice among the candidates than to stay home and do nothing? Just reflect on the battles fought (women and Blacks, especially) to gain the right to vote. So speak your mind on November 5!

Your every voter, as surely as your chief magistrate, exercises a public trust.

– Grover Cleveland

TIP OF THE WEEK

☞ If you know you're going to be standing in line, bring a magazine or some mail to read.

ROASTED PUMPKIN SEEDS

Seeds from one pumpkin (1 to 2 cups)
1 teaspoon peanut or canola oil
salt (optional)

Remove the seeds from a pumpkin and rinse thoroughly. Pat dry between layers of paper towel. Put seeds in a shallow baking pan and drizzle on the oil, stirring to coat each seed Spread the seeds out in the pan and bake at 325° F until seeds are golden and crunchy (about 1 hour). Stir frequently, to turn Serve as is or sprinkle with salt. Store unused seeds in an airtight container, up to a month. Retoast stored seeds for about 5 minutes, as needed.

Makes 1 to 2 cups.

The OLD FARMER'S WEATHER PROVERBS

Where the wind is on Martinmas Eve (Nov. 10), there it will be for the rest of winter.

Nature is conquered by obeying her.

Snow for a se'night (week) is a mother to the earth, for ever after a stepmother.

A bad winter betide, if hair grows thick on the bear's hide.

– Ozarks proverb

OPINION

People Must Decide If Milk Is Essential

The minimum on-farm, wholesale and retail prices set by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) should be seen for what they are — dues paid by all consumers of drinking milk to ensure a continued, inexpensive, wholesome supply of drinking milk from nearby processors and nearby farms.

If the dues are removed, and the milk supply is left unprotected, it will begin to dry up in unprofitable and marginally profitable areas.

Why? Because under a totally free market environment, there is no value to anything unless it is in short supply.

Pure, free-market enterprise is good for the things not needed for survival. It will never provide everything needed to everybody, because there is no incentive to do so.

The only reason to have a government, a society or any other structure of people working together is for a common good.

And if the resulting good isn't common, then everybody shouldn't have to help make it possible.

The reason the PMMB was given the authority to set those minimum prices was because of the common good — ensuring the availability of a nearly perfect food.

And of all the current political issues promoted under the banner of helping children, and all the cause groups claiming to speak on behalf of children, the PMMB structure shouldn't have to explain itself.

But it does, because of a growing, but not well considered, political rhetoric that says that free market forces are all-beneficial.

But, if that's so, why have a government at all?

The goal of the PMMB's authority to set minimum milk prices is to make sure of milk's availability to all.

The goal of free market entrepreneurs is to make money. The easier it is to make money, the better. One of the rules to making money is that those who can't afford to buy it don't get it.

The other rule is, don't spend anything on the business that doesn't pay for itself in providing a profitable return.

The goal of government is to provide all governed with essential services (such as defense, justice and protection from crime), and adequate supplies of essential resources (such as potable water, and nontoxic air) that the governed cannot provide for themselves, individually.

To finally end the ongoing debate about whether the PMMB should continue to have its minimum price-setting authority, a decision must be made.

Do we want a nearly perfect food to be available to all at an affordable price, or just to those who can afford to pay whatever price can be charged?

The decision should not be about, or influenced by, certain business entities positioning to control a market. It also should not be about some businesses yelling, "Unfair!" when they can't otherwise force smaller competitors out of business.

It's about people getting milk.

The battle over the authority of the PMMB to set minimum wholesale and retail prices is never going to stop unless the majority of the people decide once and for all that milk is essential in a healthy diet, and that it should be available to all.

Now Is The Time

To Remember Flowing Grain Acts Like Quicksand

One measure of a farmer's success is the amount of grain that flows in and out of the wagons and bins each year.

Yet each year flowing grain claims the lives of farmers and family members, reports Robert Anderson, extension agronomy agent.

Unfortunately, victims of this type of accident are usually children 16 years of age or younger.

Last year Lancaster County lost a young girl in a flowing grain accident. Children are excited about harvest, attracted by the activity, and intrigued by the thought of playing in a mountain of grain.

Farmers are just as susceptible. They are busy and sometimes become careless, take a shortcut, or simply slip.

Regardless of the contributing factor, flowing grain can grab you and pull you under in 10 seconds. Moreover, it only takes two to three seconds to become trapped and unable to escape.

Remember, a stationary pile of grain may become flowing grain by walking or playing on it. So, respect a pile of grain or moving grain and avoid becoming a victim.

To Look At Feed Supplies

Will you run out of feed before next year's harvest season? Do you have enough feeds of the right quality? Will you need to purchase some additional forage or grain? What prices will you have to pay for the quality of feed you will need?

These are important questions to consider as you embark on your winter feeding program, according to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent.

Take time now to calculate your herd's feed needs and compare them to your feed inventories. Even with the good grain crop we had this year, we are expecting tight grain supplies again next summer.

Thus, prices could increase before next year's harvest season and be similar to this year's grain prices.

Grain and hay prices may not drop much lower than current prices. If this is the case, it might make good business sense to take action in the weeks ahead to lock in your feed supplies, prices, and quality. That way you know what you will be working with in the months ahead.

Options include contract for future deliveries, secure a line of credit, or borrow money to purchase feed for immediate delivery and storage or look at alternative feed sources.

To Know Your Feeds

Feed quality varies considerably from year to year. To fine-tune your feeding program and enhance performance and profitability of your herd, feeds should be tested periodically, according to Glenn Shirk, extension dairy agent.

Forage tests may not be completely accurate, but they are one of the best guides we have for balancing rations properly.

Once you start feeding your newly balance ration, observe the herd's eating habits, feed intake, milk production, metabolic problems (ketosis, DA's, etc.), changes in body condition and nature of manure.

Discuss your observations with your nutritionist and veterinarian. Make necessary changes in the ration and continue to observe the herd closely. This is the art of feeding and the mark of a good herd manager.

THE BIBLE SPEAKS

BY LAWRENCE W. ALTHOUSE

NO MATTER THE COST

NO MATTER THE COST
November 3, 1996

Background Scripture:
Ezekial 3:22 through 5:17

Devotional Reading:
Acts 10:9-16

Normally, I can write three or four columns of "The Bible Speaks" in the time this one has taken. Will Rogers used to say that he never met a man he didn't like. And I used to say I had never met a Bible text from which something couldn't be gleaned. But, for the better part of this day I was confronted with a text that didn't speak to me at all.

However, during my fifth or sixth reading of this long passage, Ezekiel 3:22 through 5:17, I jotted down some probing thoughts that came to me and I share these with you for whatever enlightenment God can shine through this "glass darkly."

The first thing that occurred to me was that nothing in my life — despite what I had considered to be a fair number of crises and defeates — can compare with what it cost Ezekiel to be God's prophet. There have been times when I thought it cost me a lot to be a preacher and pastor, but the price I paid was a paltry sum compared to what Ezekiel had to pay.

PAYING THE PRICE

Well, no, it wasn't that he "had to pay" this price, but that he did choose to pay it rather than turn aside from God's call. Presumably he could have run away, had a nervous breakdown, or checked into a hospital. But Ezekiel, although he couldn't have enjoyed this experience, never even seemed to consider failing to fulfill God's purpose.

So, when I look at Ezekiel, I feel both inspired and chastened by his example. I should never again complain of the cost of Christian witness — but I probably will. And what about you?

Secondly, I was struck by the fact that the one man who truly understoon God's message of warning and repentance was the very man who suffered its consequences before those whose obstinance brought ruin upon the nation. He heeded God's message and they rejected it. They should have paid the price first, but he did it in a set of symoblic acts that are hard for us to comprehend. God called him to act out the calamity that was to fall upon the people and inflict torture upon himself, first for the period of Israel's punishment — 390 days, one for each year — and secondly for the period of Judah's exile — 40 days representing 40 years.

NOT FAIR!

It hardly seems fair or reasonable that this obedient prophet should be called to suffer so much for an unresponsive and rebellious people. But that is the heart of the Good News of Jesus Christ, isn't it? One man suffered and died on a cross for all humankind forever. It wasn't fair. And life is not fair, but it can be redemptive. In every age there are few here and there who take upon themselves suffering and hardship far beyond their share, who anticipate in their own persons the impending fate that is brought on by others. Do you know anyone like that?

Finally and most of all, this passage says to me that, no matter how unhearing and rebellious we may be, God never stops sending us the message. He sent Ezekeiel to the people of Jerusalem — no response. Then to the exiles in Babylon — no response. And then, the voice of prophecy was to be stilled, he sent Ezekiel to live out in dramatic symbolism the fate that his people refused to acknowledge.

They may not look or talk like Ezekiel and the prophets of old, but I believe that God still sends us people through whom he sends the message, whether or not we hear or see it. Somewhere in this world God is speaking to us through people like Ezekiel who cannot resist God's command to be his prophets — no matter what it may cost.

Farm Family Donates Calf To Help Support Four Diamonds Fund

Robert Hershey shows an all-black wooley bear caterpillar. Robert is being treated for leukemia and has benefitted from programs made available through the Four Diamonds Fund, a nonprofit program at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center to help children being treated for cancer.

But, she said that Robert's recovery seemed slow, and his breathing difficult. A trip to the doctor revealed a swollen spleen, an indication of serious infection fighting.

Within a week, Robert was back with the doctor and on his way toward a diagnosis of leukemia, and a stay in the hospital. Marilyn said he had grown pale and weak.

With all their concern of realizing they were in a battle for their son's life, Marilyn said they were more or less in shock during the first couple of days.

She said that about the second or third day, Robert was in the hospital a social worker came in and said, "You have a lot of things to worry about. Don't think money has to be one of your concerns right now."

Marilyn said that she didn't understand what the social worker was talking about, but the words were comforting. The Hersheys have major medical insurance for such crises, but it also carries a high deductible.

Several days later, the Four Diamonds Fund was explained.

"In our case, they have picked up everything financially that insurance company wouldn't," she said, quick to add that their insurance company has been loyal.

"The insurance company has been very, very faithful," she said, noting that she has known people whose insurance company stopped paying about halfway through treatment.

But the Four Diamonds Fund provides more than financial grants. It provides a program of support for the young victims of cancer.

It provides a program called Child Life, a program that uses play therapy to help children confront their fears about treatments, such as spinal taps, bone marrow extraction and chemotherapy.

Marilyn said that prior to going to the hospital, Robert was shy around people he didn't know, though he was not timid. In fact, both Duane and Marilyn laughed this week when talking about how strong-willed and tough their son is.

However, Marilyn said Robert lay on his hospital bed, not looking at anyone, not talking.

Then one morning, a play therapist came into the room and read a book to Robert. He did not respond to her presence, but she finished the book, Marilyn said, not skipping a word.

Though Robert didn't flinch when the therapist got up and told him that she would be back later, as soon as the therapist was out of the hospital room, Robert turned to Marilyn and asked, "When is she coming back?"

That afternoon, the therapist returned, reading another book to Robert, who still refused to recognize her presence.

The next day, he was invited to attend a pizza party in the play room. That was it, he was out of his shell, Marilyn said.

In fact, except for the pain that goes along with his monthly spinal taps, she said that Robert actually looks forward to his trips to the medical center, which is the medicine and medical research school for Penn State University.

Robert underwent six months of intensive chemotherapy, losing his hair and suffering some side effects normally associated with the treatment. He continues on several different chemotherapy treatments that are to last until January 1998.

If everything continues well, he will be a regular visitor to the hospital until he's 18, and then his checkups may eventually drop to once every five years.

In the meantime, the Hersheys wanted to find a way to help bring attention to the good service provided through the Four Diamonds Fund, and how people can get

Silage: Field to Feedbunk North American Conference

ITHACA, N.Y. — Silage is a primary component of animal agriculture in temperate climates.

Silage: Field to Feedbunk, a national conference to be held in Hershey, Feb. 11-13, 1997, will focus on this significant agricultural issue.

Thirty-five leading agricultural scientists from North America will discuss all aspects of silage production and utilization. Speakers will include agronomists, agricultural engineers, farm advisers, industry representatives, animal scientists, plant pathologists, dairy nutritionists, and extension educators.

The conference will provide practical guidelines for producers and promote an integrated systems approach to silage production.

Session topics are plant and field issues to meet the challenge, harvesting a high-quality silage (including kernel processing), storage methods, additives management, mycotoxins and spoilage, quality evaluation, and feeding.

Dairy and livestock producers, consultants, industry representatives, veterinarians, extension educators, and university specialists should consider attending this important event. The conference structure will encourage interaction between participants and speakers through discussion periods after every few presentations.

A trade show and reception may be held Feb. 11, from 6 p.m. to 10 p.m. as part of the conference. A preconference and tour, to be announced, are also being planned.

The conference planning committee included Jud Heinrichs, animal scientist, Penn State University; Greg Roth, Agronomist, Penn State University; Dennis Buckmaster, agricultural engineer, Penn State University; Larry Chase, animal scientist, Cornell University; Janet Fallon, crop specialist, Agway, Inc.; Robert Graves, agricultural engineer, Penn State University; Marvin Hall, agronomist, Penn State University; Rich Lutz, livestock products specialist, Pioneer Hi-Bred International, Inc.; and Richard Meinert, extension educator, University of Connecticut Cooperative Extension.

The registration fee is $160 in U.S. funds if postmarked on or before Jan. 15; $190 in U.S. funds if postmarked after Jan. 15 and for walk-ins.

The fee includes admission to the conference, one lunch, break refreshments, and a copy of the conference proceedings. Checks should be made payable to NRAES.

All major credit cards are also accepted. Refunds must be requested by Jan. 15, and there is a $25 fee to process a refund.

The conference will be held at the Hershey Lodge and Convention Center. A block of rooms has been reserved at the conference site for conference participants. To reserve a room, call the Hershey Lodge at (717) 533-3311.

Mention that you are attending the silage conference to receive the special conference rate of $70 for a single room, $74 for a double, $81 for a triple, and $88 for a quad.

Reservations must be made by Jan. 15 to receive the special conference rate. After that date, the lodge will no longer hold rooms at the conference rate, and reservations will be accepted on a space and rate availability basis.

Conference brochures containing a complete conference program, a registered form, directions to the conference site, and other information will be available from NRAES in early November. To order one or more free brochures, contact NRAES, Cooperative Extension, 152 Riley-Robb Hall, Ithaca, NY 14853-5701; phone (607) 255-7654; fax (607) 254-8770; or e-mail nraes@cornell.edu.

STATE COLLEGE (Centre Co.) — Modern technology continues to play a major part in today's dairy industry.

The advent of the laptop computer has revolutionized dairy record analysis to even greater heights. Not only does the Pa. DHIA technician have the ability to enter basic herd information into the laptop computer, but the technician now has the ability to create reports on test day.

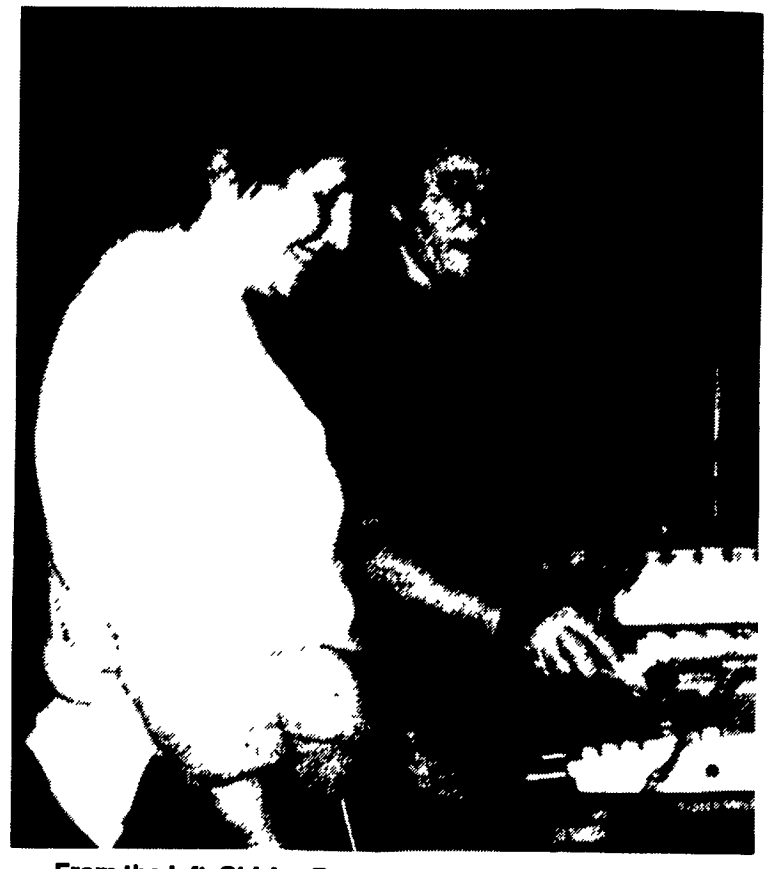
At Pa. DHIA, we feel that having this information available in such a timely fashion, will create yet another way the dairymen can use our service to better manage their herds.

Currently the Pa. DHIA technicians enter herd data into the Quick Barn Sheet Program. After data collection is complete, the data collected will then be transferred or updated to the Westfalia Dairy Plan program.

The Westfalia Dairy Plan program processes milk, breed, herd health and veterinary information for daily management and decision making. Dairy Plan gives you the information you need, just the way you want it by creating your own reports or by using the several reports that come with the system.

Not only can Dairy Plan present herd data in a report format, but Dairy Plan can present data in a graph format. The sophistication of this program will allow the dairyment to select which program best suits their needs. Reports are lists of cows in useful ways. Graphs are visual charts of your data. Dairy Plan has many different options for customizing reports and graphs.

Vet checklists are also available through Dairy Plan at Pa. DHIA. A "vet checklist" can include activities such as pregnancy checks and dry-off dates.



From the left, Shirley Brown, of Scarlet Oak Farm, watches as Anne Brooks, a Centre County Pa.DHIA technician, explains same-day test reports.

Passing On The Farm Workshop In Lebanon

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — Pennsylvnaia is at a crossroads in agriculture that will affect future generations and the status of the Commonwealth's number one industry.

Currently, 45 percent of Pennsylvania's farm operators are age 55 or older. There are two times as many operators over the age of 65 as under the age of 35.

In the next ten years, 10,000 farms, or nearly one quarter of the state's 44,000 farms, need to be transferred to the next generation, or they may go out of existence.

Working to assist in the successful transfer of family farms in Pennsylvania and in turn contribute to the revitalization of our rural communities, the Pennsylvania Farm Link program is sponsoring a Beginning and Retiring Farm Workshop at the Lebanon County Ag Center on Friday, Nov. 22.

The regional workshop will address "Passing on the Farm" issues, business planning, farm loan resources, marketing ideas, start-up strategies, goal setting, legal aspects of farm transfers, conservation easements, and communication skills. It will be held from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m., with lunch on your own.

Participating agencies and individuals include Pennsylvania Farm Link, Penn State Cooperative Extension, Pennsylvania Farm Bureau's Legal Services Plan, Keystone Farm Credit, Farm Service Agency, and a panel of local farmers.

The Lebanon Ag Center is located at 2120 Cornwall Road on the corner of the Lebanon Area Fairgrounds.

According to Farm Link Coordinator Marion Bowlan, "In spite of the decline in family farms and the obstacles that deter all but the most devoted, many Pennsylvanians are looking for ways to enter farming."

She cites as evidence the fact that over 900 people have inquired about the Farm Link program since it's August, 1994 start-up. Almost 200 of the responses have come from people who want to get into farming in the 10 county area surrounding Lebanon.

"We need more retiring farmers or landholders who would like to work someone into their operation in the South Central area of the state," she said. "Most of the beginning farmers in this area hve at least two years of experience and would like to stay here."

Beginning farmers are finding it increasingly difficult to acquire the capitol needed to enter farming. At the same time, Pennsylvania's current farm operators are graying. The average age of a farmer in Pennsylvania is now over 52.

Many farmers reaching retirement age are having difficulty phasing out of farming while maintaining adequate resources for retirement. Farm Link is working on innovative ways for retiring farmers to gradually transfer their farms to the next generations and minimize estate taxes.

Individuals who want to enter farming or farmers considering retirement are invited to attend this workshop on Friday, Nov. 22, 1996 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. There is no cost to attend; however, pre-registration is requested by calling the Farm Link program at (717) 787-9555 by November 20, 1996.

Pennsylvania Farm Link is a component of the Center for Rural Pennsylvania, a research and policy development agency of the Pennsylvania General Assembly.

Farm Family Donates Calf To Help Support Four Diamonds Fund

involved.

It was decided that they would offer to sell one of their best calves, perhaps the best potential they own, in order to help provide some support to the Fund.

According to fund literature, it was started in 1972 by a Lancaster couple, Charles and Irma Millard, parents of Christopher Millard, who lost his battle with cancer a the age of 14.

"It was the Millards' dream to put into existence a fund that would provide financial assistance to families whose children were being treated for cancer at Penn State University Children's Hospital at the Milton S. Hershey Medical Center," the literature states.

The name, Four Diamonds Fund, came from an essay that Christopher wrote for a school project, shortly before he died.

In the essay, or short story, the four diamonds are courage, wisdom, honesty, and strength.

His fantasy story was about Sir Millard, one of the unknown knights of Sir Aurthur's Round Table, who had fallen captive to an evil, but apparently not entirely heartless sorceress.

In order to gain his freedom, he needed to accomplish tasks that would eventually earn him four diamonds.

The essay was published by the Millards, noting themselves as, "Heirs of Christopher Russell Millard." The touching story even includes all mistakes and the teacher's note, expressing confidence in the young man's talent.

The Hersheys, who farm about 350 acres and milk 75 Holsteins, aren't looking for donations for themselves. All funds raised go to the Four Diamonds Fund.

People interested in helping this program continue can purchase "shares" in the calf, which are really donations made in the name of the calf.

However, all checks should be made payable to: Nittany Lion Fall Classic.

The 13th Nitnany Lion Fall Classic Sale is schedule to start 11 a.m., Nov. 16, in the Penn State Ag Arena, located near the football stadium.

Including the donated calf, there are expected to be 15 Jersey calves, and 68 Holsteins.

The Penn State Dairy Science Club, which runs the Nittany Lion Fall Classic, is not charging any commission on the sale of the Hershey calf.

It may be possible that the calf may be purchased during the Classic and donated back for resale. However the calf is not returning to the Hershey farm.

Acknowledging that the grandam of the calf is Rothrock Aero Luelle-ET and that she is perhaps one of the best calves the farm has ever bred, Duane said he hopes she does well for whomever buys the calf. So far nine bulls out of Luelle have gone into service for artificial insemination, and numerous embryos have been sold domestically and foreign.

The Four Diamond Fund is helped through the fraternity system at Penn State, not only through the dance marathon, but also through the different fraternities and sororities "adopting" children being treated with cancer at the Hershey Medical Center.

Robert has been adopted by the Alpha Sigma Alpha sorority, and the Alpha Sigma Phi fraternity. The students request photos of Robert and keep in contact with the Hersheys for updates and information on Robert.

And Robert and the Hersheys have and expect to continue to attend the annual marathon in support of the effort.

On Wednesday, the Hersheys met with the members of the adoptive students at the Medical Center.

Those wishing more information on the Four Diamonds Fund should call (717) 531-6086.

Those wishing to buy shares should call Brad and Sandy hershey at (717) 436-9449, or the Four Diamonds Fund.

For more information about the Nittany Lion Fall Classic, call Dale Olver or Lawrence Muller at (814) 863-3914; Joshua Harvatine, Holstein sale chairperson, at (814) 867-8517; or Jersey sale chair Crystal Miller at (814) 862-1839.

Or call the Pa. Holstein Association at (814) 234-0364.

According to Olver, the quality of the animals is outstanding, with animals coming from consignments from several states.

Managing Livestock

WELLSBORO (Tioga Co.) — Managing Livestock on Pasture will be taught on Thursday Nov. 7, at Mom's Country Kitchen, from 7 to 9 p.m.

• High Quality Forage From Pasture Throughout The Grazing Season will be taught by Darrell Emmick, state grazing land management specialist of the Natural Resource Conservation Service.

• Tips For Raising Beef And Dairy Beef On Pasture will be taught by Harold Harpster, Department of Dairy and Animal Science at Penn State.

Raising livestock on pasture is a natural fit for the hilly topography and humid climate of Steuben and Tioga counties. With the fencing and watering technology now available producers can achieve high levels of milk and meat production through proper grazing management. For cow/calf producers and dairy farmers, keeping ruminants on pasture later in the season can save a tremendous amount in feed costs.

For pie and coffee, and for the use of the room we are charging $2 per person to cover our expenses. Checks should be made out to Penn State Extension — Tioga County. We would appreciate knowing if you plan to attend. Please call us in Steuben County at (607) 776-9631, ext. 2300 or in Tioga County at (717) 724-9120. This program is cosponsored by Cornell Cooperative Extension and Penn State Extension.

U.S. Agriculture Secretary

dollars for roads, schools, and other needs in rural areas as well as investment and tax programs to help keep small businesses family-owned.

Regarding dairy farming, Glickman said, "No one is doing that well in the dairy industry except on large dairies on the west coast." Modernizing the federal milk marketing order system is one of the Clinton administration's goals in agriculture. By decreasing the number of orders as mandated in the 1996 Farm Bill and by making it less complicated, he believes the federal government can make milk prices more even among the 36 orders in the current system.

"Total deregulation of agriculture would hurt small operators, who are not able to fend for themselves," the secretary stated in answer to a question about whether or not the government should be involved in agriculture. The 105,000 employees in his department also run the forest service, nutritional programs, such as food stamps and school lunches, and the meat and poultry inspection programs.

Paul Hartle, the host of the farm tour and forum, presented Glickman with a Pennsylvania Holstein jacket and showed the group his best cow, "Miss American," who is a fifth generation Excellent Holstein with a milk record of 40,000 lbs.

Primarily the administration is trying to make the farm economy healthy for all by eliminating unfair competition practices, particularly in the beef industry. Glickman reported that only three companies control 80% of beef packing and processing in the U.S., and they only buy from selected feedlots. The government is suing Iowa Beef Packers, the largest packing company in the world, to stop this type of practice and is monitoring marketing and supplies in an effort to improve prices to producers.

Other ways Glickman said the government can help smaller producers are to do a better job of enforcing laws already on the books about unfair competition, to make sure lending practices are equitable and to encourage more integrated arrangements.

Although the administration's policy is not to "micromanage" farms by telling farmers what they must do, he said the government should provide a "safety net" for farm prices, technical assistance (such as in a more "farmer-friendly" conservation program), and a favorable economic climate. Current low inflation and interest rates, the lowest at the same time since the 1970s, are most helpful to farmers, he commented. Also, land values compared to debt have increased for the last three years, helping farmers build equity in their operaitons.

As for rural development, the administration is aggressively seeking more federal funding for water, sewage, telecommunications and telemedical systems. Improving the crop insurance program is another of Glickman's goals. He said the government may have to get more involved in agricultural marketing again if overproduction occurred.

N.Y. Sets Plans for 1997 Vegetable Conference

ITHACA, N.Y. — It's not too early for you to add important meeting dates to your calendar for 1997.

The 9th Annual New York State Vegetable Conference will be held on February 11-13 at the Four Points Hotel Sheraton Inn and Convention Center, Liverpool, N.Y.

As in the past, it draws more than 1,200 fresh market and processing vegetable growers and allied industry representatives from around the state, the northeast region and Canada.

Principle commodities to be covered will include kraut cabbage, onions, potatoes, leafy greens, beans, and market/specialty crops. In addition, a half-day potato short course and an in-depth all-day sweet corn school are planned, along with sessions on organic production, soil quality management, labor regulations and management, and two-day special computer workshops.

There are three to four concurrent meetings each day, with the ever-popular social hour on the Tuesday evening that will include a tribute to the late Robert Becker. Becker was a special friend to growers and the New York State processing industry, who died unexpectedly in July. Also, with the NYS Vegetable Growers Association observing its 85th anniversary in 1996, a history exhibit is planned.

The overflowing 80-exhibitor trade show always offers the latest in equipment, supplies, services and useful information. As in the past, the published Proceedings will be available at the conference or by mail.

Trade show exhibitor information is available. Registration and the detailed program will be available in early December. For more information, contact the NYS Vegetable Growers Association, P.O. Box 4256, Ithaca, NY 14852, (607) 539-7648.

Lancaster Swine Club Honors New, Old Members

ANDY ANDREWS
Lancaster Farming Staff
MOUNT JOY (Lancaster Co.) — "One of my goals is to get every member to go to the Pennsylvania Farm Show," said Chet Hughes, Lancaster extension agent, during the awards ceremony at the annual Lancaster County 4-H Swine Banquet Tuesday night at the Country Table Restaurant.

Top three project books at the Lancaster County 4-H Swine Club annual banquet went to, from left, Gerald Boyd, first place, Sarah Boyd, second place, and Jill Hoffines, third place.

Rookie of the Year Award went to Joelyn Donough, 9, daughter of Ed and Larue Donough, Manheim, far right. Outstanding 4-H member honor went to Gerald Boyd, far left. Special awards were presented to longtime 4-H leaders Marlin Cassel, Manheim, second from right, for his help at the Manheim Farm Show, and Warren Heisey, for his 30 years of devotion to 4-H.

Before the awards were presented to 4-H members and leaders, Hughes reviewed the past year in the swine club.

Hughes said this is the 9th year for the countywide club, which conducted the 11th show and sale at the Manheim Community Farm Show grounds. He said he has seen the membership grow to almost 90 members, with 22 new members this year.

"We're waiting to hit the 100 mark," said Hughes.

The club conducted the 8th successful carcass show. Twenty-eight members will go on to the 1997 state Farm Show. He said he has seen a lot of good things come out of program in the past few years.

The Rookie of the Year Award went to Joelyn Donough, 9, daughter of Ed and Larue Donough, Manheim. Joelyn is in the third grade at Sporting Hill Elementary School.

Warren Heisey, longtime 4-H leader in the county, awarded the Outstanding 4-H member honor to Gerald Boyd. Warren said Gerald has "come a long way with his achievements outside the show."

Gerald, 18, son of Deb and Kerry Boyd, Ephrata, is a senior at Ephrata High School. The county honor roll candidate, Gerald indicated that he learned to overcome his shyness through participating in shows and learning to give reasons in the many 4-H livestock judging competitions he has been a part of.

"That experience helped me open up and speak in front of people," Gerald said.

Special awards were presented to longtime 4-H leaders Marlin Cassel, Manheim, for his help at the Manheim

Court Rules In Favor Of Pa. Milk Marketing Board

VERNON ACHENBACH JR.
Lancaster Farming Staff

HARRISBURG (Dauphin Co.) — The techniques employed by the Pennsylvania Milk Marketing Board (PMMB) to set minimum wholesale prices for school milk sales, and the authority to do so, survived a legal challenge by the School District of Philadelphia, the Consumers Education and Protective Association, and Lance Haver, the association's education director.

An appeal of the PMMB's ruling on minimum wholesale prices of half-pints of milk in the region including Philadelphia was made by the School District and Haver with the the seven-member Commonwealth Court.

The decision reaffirmed the legality of the PMMB and its methods and was written by Judge Bonnie Brigance Leadbetter, with one dissention by Court President Judge James Gardner Colins.

The challenge was to the PMMB's authority to set minimum wholesale milk prices to schools in the Philadelphia area, and the techniques used to arrive at that minimum.

According to the decision issued by the Commonwealth Court, in essense, the School District of Philadelphia sought to have the minimum wholesale price of half-pints of milk reduced to the price-level charged in nearby New Jersey school districts.

The same milk dealer that supplies Philadelphia, also supplies New Jersey schools with milk and sells it for about 4 cents less in New Jersey.

What happened was that in 1994, Lehigh Dairies petitioned the PMMB to recalculate the minimums in the milk marketing area that includes Philadelphia, because the prices hadn't been adjusted for some time.

After gathering facts used to determine dealer costs of processing and distributing milk, and hearing testimony from the Lehigh Dairies and the School District of Philadelphia, the PMMB reduced the wholesale minimum price for half-pints by 1¼ cents.

The School District sought a 5-cent reduction.

According to the decision, the legal issues raised in the appeal of the PMMB price order were threefold: "whether the enforcement of the Milk Marketing Law ... violates the Commerce Clause of the United State Constitution; whether the procedures followed by the (PMMB) ... violated (the School District's) right to due process of law; and whether the (PMMB) erred in its evaluation of evidence presented at the hearing."

As far as the first issue is concerned, Judge Leadbetter wrote that the Commerce Clause does limit the power of states to enact laws imposing substantial burdens on interstate commerce, but that there has to be a distinction made between laws that specifically benefit businesses within a state, which would not be allowed, and those laws that create the same conditions for all businesses no matter where they are located, which is allowed.

The rationale is that states may make laws, such as traffic laws, for public health and safety that may not be in effect in another state. Just because that may make it more difficult to do business in one state than the other doesn't mean that a state's laws protecting public safety and health illegally restrict interstate commerce.

The School District also argued that the PMMB authority to set minimum prices protected less efficient Pennsylvania milk dealers over more efficient out-of-state dealers.

In brief, Judge Leadbetter wrote that the minimum price provides for equally inefficient dealers in both areas, and therefore is meritless.

As far as due process of law, the court also sided with the PMMB, dismissing claims that the board was in collusion with milk dealers in setting the price, just because findings of fact were compared prior to the hearing that set the price minimum.

The ruling noted that the School District had equal opportunity to find fact and compare findings.

Also, just because the PMMB has a division that audits milk dealer records (in part to ensure that farmers get paid what they're owed for their milk) and uses some of those facts when considering the cost of production in setting the minimum prices, that doesn't mean it is acting in conflict with its duties.

"The board must give equal consideration to the interests of milk producers, milk dealers, and the consuming public when fixing the price of milk," Leadbetter wrote, citing case precedence.

"Review of the record demonstrates that the board fully complied with this charge and provided all parties with due process of law."

Further into the decision, Leadbetter wrote, "There is no evidence here that the (PMMB) commingled its adjudicatory and investigatory functions."

As far as the complaint that the PMMB erred in reviewing the evidence presented at the hearing, and overstated the price of milk by almost 5 cents, Leadbetter ruled that the board has the discretion to use a variety of factors and to weigh them as it sees fit to calculate a minimum price.

According to the decision, the School District and Haver "ack-

Lancaster Poultry Association Receives Funds For Promotion

ta presented a check for $3,400, which is the profit from the poultry food booth open during the week of the Ephrata Fair in September.

Dr. John Schwartz, Lancaster County Extension director, spoke of the Association's continual change in order to adapt to the needs of its membership and the strategic planning sessions held to make it a viable organization for the industry.

Part of this planning was to define the Association's vision, which is to "prepare people for leadership in the poultry industry to insure a growing and progressive industry."

The Association also defined its mission statement: "To insure a strong future of the Lancaster County Poultry Industry by promoting its high quality people and poultry products, offering timely educational programs for producers and consumers, encouraging good industry citizenship and strengthening farm and consumer relationships."

Schwartz thanked members for generously contributing monies to the Hands on House, a local children's museum, which constructed a replica of a modern type poultry operation.

Lancaster County Poultry Ambassador Sheri Kreider told the audience how she is promoting the industry through ag in the classroom presentations and at public functions.

"I'm proud to endorse a great industry with poultry products," she said.

At the banquet, FFA members from the Elizabethtown High School who won the poultry judging championship after competing at the national level were honored by the industry. FFA members included Krista Hoffman, Nicole Eisenhauer, Amy Brandt, and Jason Cotton. William Erikson served as FFA advisor.

During the past year, George Georges, outgoing president, reported that the Association supported an agressive radio program promoting poultry products and served as a mediator in odor and fly disputes between the community and farmers.

During the business meeting, George Georges officially handed over leadership of the organization to Don Brubaker, a Strasburg poultry producer, who has served as vice president for two years and held other positions previously. Georges will continue on the board as secretary. Other officers elected include Tim Hartsough as vice president, and John Mattilio as treasurer.

During the upcoming year, the association plans to continue to influence legislature that affects poultry farmers. The Association also needs to purchase a new food booth to replace the delapidated one now in use, and members are requested to volunteer time so the food booth can be used at other county fairs.

Christian Herr, deputy secretary for the Dept. of Agriculture, left, presents a check to the Poultry Association for $8,500. George Georges, president, accepts the check.

Guy Martin thanks Lancaster County Poultry Ambassador Sheri Kreider for her work in promoting the industry.

During the Lancaster County Poultry Association banquet, Clair and Shirley High of Ephrata presented a check for $3,400

Small Milking Facilities Can Compete With Calif. 'Miracle Parlors'

said Reinemann.

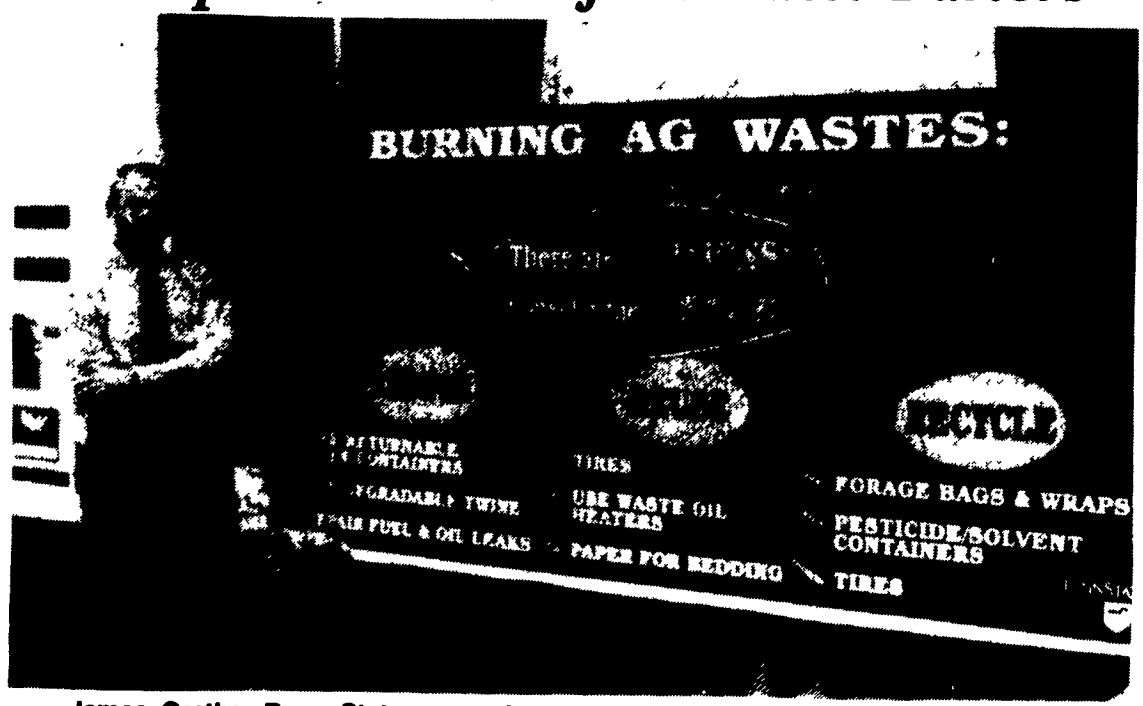
There is a clearer trend, he said, for economy of scale in dairy operations. Five-hundred cow operations have proven to be more profitable, over the long run, than 50 cows. However, dairy farmers need not necessarily expand to 500 cows — they can "capture most of those economies of scale with 150-200 cows," he said.

Wisconsin, like other Midwest states, is going through a "parlor boom," while the average herds still number only 50-60 cows. But in Wisconsin, families are combining herds and coming up with 100-150 cows on these "multifamily" operations.

Some of large western dairy herds are in the 2,000-6,000 cow range.

For producers who want to expand to 300 cows, a good double- 8 can bring milking labor costs down to 83 cents or even 75 cents a hundredweight. Where the mistakes come into play are when the dairy producer overcapitalizes and builds a parlor bigger then needed — such as a double-12 for a 300-cow herd. "This is where you can make the biggest mistake," he said.

Dr. Douglas J. Reinemann, department of biological systems engineering at the University of Wisconsin, indicated that if a dairy farmer can build the parlor for 20 percent of gross annual milk sales, the producer can achieve the same returns on investment as the big California herds.



James Garthe, Penn State ag engineer, at a display on handling ag plastics.

Reinemann reviewed the various parlors and the average cost of labor (at $10 per person per hour) for different parlor types:

- Pipelines. Labor costs are $1.50 per CWT. Pipeline parlors can be purchased with gross sales of $240,000 at $48,000.
- Flatbarn. Costs can be down to $1.10 per CWT.
- Double-8. Costs range between 75 cents and 83 cents a CWT with 300 cows. Annual sales at $720,000 per year mean that a center should cost about $144,000.
- Double-12. Costs are about $1.22 a CWT, with 500 cows. Costs increase if you are milking only 100-300 cows.
- California 20. Costs are $1.13 per CWT.

approximately $2.4 million. A dairy farmer should spend no more than $480,000 (20 percent of $2.4 million).

In the end, the biggest influence on milking efficiency is the person, said Reinemann. As a result, producers need to look at their labor costs. Do they want somebody doing the milking for $5 per hour or have the owner doing it at an opportunity cost of $20 per hour? The university has looked at the milking times of labor on various dairies. What Reinemann has found that the average person milks about 25 cows per hour. Some can achieve 30-40 cows, but most milk in the 25 cow per hour range.

Additional milking labor sometimes helps — but not by as much as people believe.

The key is to design the parlor to fit the number of cows that are projected in the operation and design the parlor, for the smaller herds, as a "one-person operation," said the engineer.

And as with many other businesses, location dictates the design. So when investing in a parlor, Reinemann told the producers to "think long and hard" if you're going to make this investment.

Plan for expansion and "put your money in the building before the equipment."

Think about what long-range plans are, design for proper ventilation (there is always a "tremendous moisture load" in a parlor, he said), and don't be obsessed with speed. "(Speed) can be a pretty costly obsession," Reinemann said.

For producers who want to invest heavily and expand to 1,000 or more cows, it is smart to split the herd into two 500-cow or more operations for improved efficiency. "Economy and efficiency point toward multiple smaller operations," said Reinemann.

"If we do it right, we can capture those economies and stay competitive with the rest of the world," he said.

Swine AI Demo

During a concurrent session Tuesday morning, Dr. Ken Kephart, Penn State swine expert, provided a demonstration on the benefits of correct swine artificial insemination (AI) to several producers.

Kephart said, "AI offers a lot of potential for herd improvement," he said. "The bottom line is a better product and more consistency with good genetics — a better, more correct market hog."

To maximize success with AI, producers need to keep in mind three things — good timing, good technique, and good semen.

Good timing is necessary — use the boar to find the sows in heat.

Next, using the proper technique to deliver semen to the sow's cervix is key, doing it "slowly and patiently," Kephart said.

Courier services have provide much quicker delivery times for semen, and semen extenders have worked well to prolong the life of semen. So good semen is available and should be part of an overall herd improvement plan.

Permits For Ag Expansion

On Tuesday afternoon Tim Royer, P.E. with Timber Tech Engineering, Womelsdorf, spoke about the challenges of obtaining permits for agricultural expansion.

Royer indicated that in the future, more regulation would be the norm, rather than less, and regulations vary from location to location.

The key for producers who want to expand is to become familiar with the zoning process, which can take six to 12 months, and to work through the process. He told producers to be prepared to deal with 5-6 different agencies and to have this as part of the plan.

Royer provided a checklist of necessary paperwork for producers and agencies to contact, along with phone numbers and addresses (for Lebanon County).

Along with the expo was a trade show which demonstrated equipment for new housing and other agri-related industries.

At the expo on Tuesday there were 260 free bagged lunches provided for producers. The expo continued on Wednesday.

Admission both days was free. The event was sponsored by Penn State and agribusinesses.

Ag Secretary Presents Conservation Awards To Mifflin Countians

GAIL STROCK
Mifflin Co. Correspondent

LEWISTOWN (Mifflin Co.) — Efforts by Mifflin County farmers and business owners to prevent soil from entering local waterways were recognized by state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius recently during the annual awards banquet of the Mifflin County Conservation District.

Held at the Penns Valley Christian Retreat Center, in Lewistown, Secretary Brosius presented Mifflin County commissioners with a "Chesapeake Bay Partner Community" sign in recognition of its citizens' participation in programs designed to prevent soil erosion.

"The issue is clean water," Brosius told the large audience. "Fifty percent of nonpoint source pollution in the Susquehanna River comes from farms. That number is too high."

Brosius said the Nutrient Management Act will be implemented by the State Conservation Commission staff, located within the Department of Agriculture Building in Harrisburg. As secretary of agriculture, Brosius is currently chair of the commission.

Leadership of the SCC alternates between the secretary of the Department of Agriculture and the secretary of the Deparment of Environmental Protection.

He said that the desire is to have voluntary implementation of the Nutrient Management Act.

He also discussed the PDA's ChemSweep program that has been collecting old, unwanted, or outdated farm chemicals in different areas of the state for the past couple of years.

Next year, 13 new counties are to be targeted for chemical collection by the state, which would bring the one-time program's sweep through the state to include 56 counties of the state's 67.

No questions are asked in the program, and farmers can bring the chemicals to the announced pickup site, and the state takes care of the proper disposal. Announcements of the locations, dates and times for collection are made well in advance of the collection dates.

The goal of the ChemSweep program is to prevent chemical contamination of soil and water.

In other business, Brosius presented a plaque from the PDA to John R. Goss Jr., in recognition for service to the Mifflin County Conservation District. Goss served for more than 20 years on the county board, mostly as its chairman.

Goss was also recognized by the National Association of Conservation Districts, and received a pin.

The Mifflin County Conservation District presented its Cooperator of the Year Award to Francis Uhland Jr. and family for their outstanding conservation efforts.

Uhland, along with wife Joyce and sons Chris and Andy, purchased a Ferguson Valley farm in 1990. They signed up as a district cooperator in 1992 and have since utilized contour strip cropping, the use of cover crops, crop residue management, stream crossing stabilization techniques, and stream bank fencing.

In addition, they also installed a manure storage system.

The district also presented its Goodyear Award to last year's cooperator of the year, Charles Forgy, of Wayne Township.

In other recognitions, James Hostetter, current county district chairman, received a statewide award for having the best board-meeting attendance. Out of 66 counties with districts, Mifflin County placed third.

The Environmental Awareness Award is also presented by the conservation district in recognition of conservation efforts by local business.

Mark Elsesser, of Lewistown Paper Company, in Burnham, accepted the award in recognition of the company's erosion control work done while it was building a new facility. The building plan was voluntarily submitted to, and approved by, the county conservation district.

Anthony Beers, of Strodes Mills, was recognized for his winning entry in a state-wide conservation poster contest.

In addition, the county conservation district awarded $25 each to the Big Valley FFA Chapter, and the local Boy Scouts and Girl Scouts in recognition of their conservation projects.

The Francis Uhland family accepts the Mifflin County Cooperator of the Year Award from state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius. From the left is Brosius, and Andy, Chris, Francis and Joyce Uhland.

From the left, Mifflin County commissioners Duane Aurand, Jim Beckwith, and Murray Laite received a conservation award from state Secretary of Agriculture Charles Brosius in recognitition of the county residents' conservation efforts.

Direct Marketing Conference Feb. 18-20

OWEGO, N.Y. — Plans are being finalized for the 34th annual New York State (NYS) Farmers' Direct Marketing Conference and Trade Show Feb. 18-20, at the Owego Treadway Inn.

This year's conference focuses on ways to improve and expand markets for greater customer traffic and increased income.

Opening day is split into three separate areas. The NYS Berry Growers Association is putting on a daylong program on small fruit production and marketing topics. Another program will focus on farmer's markets. This program will be of interest to farm market vendors as well as market managers. And finally, on opening day, a bus tour will visit local markets, including a winery and lunch at Bakers Acres tea room.

The second day of the conference focuses on seminars and promises to be informative on many levels. There are four consecutive sessions scheduled. Two sessions are geared toward enhancing an already ongoing farm market operation with festivals, special events, workshops, and many other useful ideas. Another seminar is sponsored by the NYS Christmas Tree Growers Association and will deal with topics relating to Christmas sales, events, and promotions. Finally, a computer seminar will help show uses of computers in operations beyond just for basic bookkeeping. This will be done with a handson approach.

The New York State Farmers' Direct Marketing Association will hold their annual meeting Wednesday afternoon. Judy Schmidt, from J. Schmidt Advertising, will speak about the new promotional efforts of the association and the new logo.

Wednesday evening is set aside for fun and interaction. The events start off with taste testing sponsored by the trade show participants. This was very successful at the last conference and is back by popular demand. Following this will be an hour of round table sharing of information and ideas between conference attendees.

Thursday, the final day of the conference, offers a wide range of strategies for improving your business. Whether it be through more effective promotion, new market ideas, or more effective debt and risk management, Thursday's programs should be of benefit to any marketer. Also on Thursday, the Long Island Extension is sponsoring a full day seminar on cut flowers. This will deal with production topics as well as promotion and marketing aspects.

Running throughout the conference will be a trade show hosting more than 30 vendors. They'll be showing all the latest in direct marketing products, from gourmet foods to promotional materials.

To attend, contact Andrea Eichhorn, conference chairman, at (607) 862-3985 for registration information.

Court Rules In Favor Of Pa. Milk Marketing Board

nowledged that there are many different ways to weigh the cross-section data. Thus, it is not surprising that (the School District's) expert witness considered one method to be the optimal method and the staff (of PMMB) and (milk) dealers recommended another."

The judge ruled that since the PMMB's decisions are supported by fact and recorded so, that it wasn't appropriate for the court to review the expertise of the PMMB in dealing with an appeal.

"Factual findings, particularly those involving statistical data which are subject to reasonable differences in interpretation, raise technical questions within the Milk Marketing Board's expertise and will not be disturbed on appeal as long as such findings are supported by the record."

According to a PMMB news release, "The court concluded that the standards and methodologies used to arrive at minimum prices, including minimum prices for school milk, were supported by substantial evidence.

"In addition, the court found that the procedures followed by the (PMMB) in adopting the order did not violate the petitioners' due process rights.

"Finally, the court held that the Milk Marketing Law does not violate the Commerce Clause of the U.S. Constitution."

Leadbetter wrote that the "delicate balance which faces the (PMMB) in fixing prices is to provide a fair return to producers and dealers, while maintaining a just consumers' price.

"The board must give equal consideration to the interests of milk producers, milk dealers, and the consuming public when fixing the price of milk. Review of the record demonstrates that the board fully complied with this charge and provided all interested parties with due process of law," stated Judge Leadbetter, in the decision.

From Crates To Crafts

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

SEVEN VALLEYS (York Co.) — Ordinary chicken crates have a facelift and new life at the Seven Valleys Farm of Tom and Cordelia Wolfe.

While the slatted wooden cages once housed chickens in transport for the family's laying-hen operation, today they display bears, bunnies, dolls and assorted crafts.

"I didn't go out and buy a lot of display pieces," explains Cordelia Wolfe of the unique display arrangements in her recently-opened Raffia and Ribbon Log House Gift Shoppe on Yellow Church Road. "I used mostly what we had here."

Her country gift shop features a variety of quality, handcrafted items, including one of Cordelia's specialties, basket lamps. Personalized pottery, unique clocks, punched tinware and whimsically-painted birdhouses are among the diverse array of artistic crafts displayed in a setting with its own unique history.

For 18 years, the Wolfes and their children, Jenny and Judd, operated the egg-production business that Tom's parents had started. After exiting the poultry business more than a year ago, they began their own lawn and landscaping enterprise.

A summer of pushing lawnmowers almost from dusk to dawn proved physically exhausting for Cordelia, who began considering other options of employment. Judd has since become a working partner in that family business with his dad, following his graduation from high school.

"I really didn't want to go away to work after having been at home all that time," she related. "It's hard to work for someone else after you've worked for yourself. And I didn't really care to go back to school to train in another area."

A creative and talented cook, she had occasionally given thought over the years to opening a restaurant. The Wolfes had always sold eggs at the farm, and in later years added Cordelia's baked goods, some produce in season, and a selection of bulk foods. She enjoyed the "people contact" with their steady flow of customers.

During a visit last fall with friends in Mifflin County, however, Cordelia came face-to-face with a clear vision of a new career. She was fascinated by the numerous on-farm craft and gift shops in the Mount Pleasant Mills area and felt that their own farm had an ideal site on which to open a similar enterprise.

"I couldn't believe they had these little shops attached to their homes and just loved the atmosphere," she smiles. One shop, at the end of a winding, tree-lined, meadow lane, especially captivated her. "When I opened the door there, that was it."

Six years ago, the Wolfes tore down a crumbling log structure in southern York County. They moved and reconstructed it themselves to adjoin their farmhouse as a family room. The 16 x 20-foot, one and one-half story structure was originally built in the 1850s by a family named Scott.

With its exposed log-and-chinked walls and open loft, the addition was a perfect setting for the Wolfes to relax and enjoy their antiques and various family collections. Cordelia knew it would also be an ideal background to showcase the type of designs she envisioned offering the public from her own talented hands and those of fellow crafters.

"My goals were to offer quality merchandise and to keep the prices low," she explains of her business philosophy.

After applying for permits in July, Cordelia found herself caught up in a swirl of chores needing to be done to be ready for her pre-holiday opening in early October. Scrubbing up the chicken crates and other "grunge jobs," as she grinningly labels some of the extensive physical labor it took to get the shop and display pieces ready, were accomplished with the help of a friend's teenage son.

Visits to regional craft shows and talking with other crafts people and shop owners helped her determine exactly what she would include in her gift line. Along with her own items, Cordelia wants to incorporate the work of other local artisans.

"I know what I like, but not necessarily what others might like," says this new businesswoman. Her selections apparently have pleased her customers, who have kept her busy replacing inventory since the shop's early October opening.

Many of Raffia and Ribbon's displays are arranged on antique family pieces which had already been used as furnishings in the log house, including an old sewing machine, Cordelia's mother's first-grade school desk and a wooden highchair that Tom's grandfather used as a baby. Her prized family quilts enhance the shop's country coziness with their color and added touch of personal history.

Jenny, a York College junior English major, worked closely with Cordelia in arranging the displays and lends a hand with customers when she is not attending classes. They arranged — and rearranged — until they found "just" the spot for each of the practical-to-whimsical range of items in the shop. One unique dis-

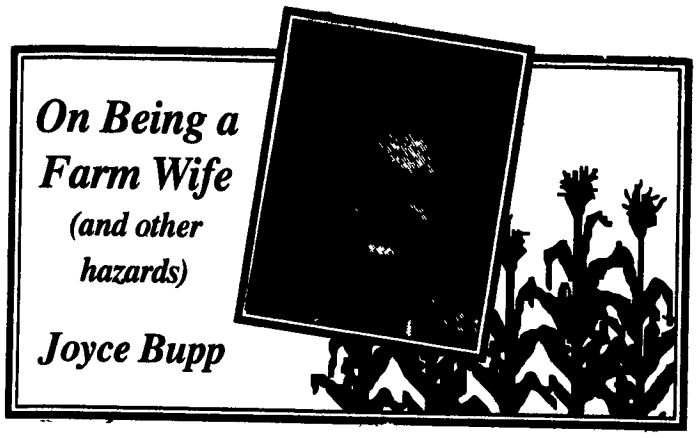
HOMESTEAD NOTES



They've been around here forever. Or at least it seems like it.

Whether or not guinea fowl were part of the barnyard population here before our tenure is one of those family history mysteries. But these funny-looking birds have amused — sometimes irritated — us for at least two decades.

Our flock of three — four until one disappeared recently — are direct descendants of the first half-dozen flighty chicks the kids and I gave The Farmer, one Father's Day ages ago. They came with the poultry purchase that brought the Chinese Weeder Geese into our lives, ostensibly to keep grass cleaned out of the garden.

Uh huh. Right. Except what those geese learned after they had grown up from cute, little downy goslings to 30-inch-necked, finger-pinchers was to snitch the corn in the cattle feed in the dairy barn, honk their noisy heads off and inflict pain with their powerful bills.

Only occasionally did they even look in the direction of the garden, and eventually met their ends as holiday feasts on the dinner table of friends.

But the guineas' less aggressive, more wildlife-like habits have spared them over the years, and generations have come and gone. Foxes have been extremely hard on them, and key factor in reducing our peak population of three dozen down to three.

The last guinea chicks that we had were hatched in the late summer a few years ago. We spied the hen and her dozen babies one afternoon; by morning, a fox had cleaned out the entire nest, leaving only feathers behind. A bad habit of that guinea's of nesting under the heavy leaf cover of a bank of forsythia bushes was her — and her chicks — undoing.

We became resigned to our dwindling population of these goofy, army-helmet shaped birds with spindly legs, gangly necks, ugly heads and steel-blue-gray feathers spotted with tiny white polka dots. They are industrious bug catchers and weed seed eaters but are most useful as watchdogs ... er, watchbirds. Their repeated, shrill shrieking when they are alarmed or agitated will almost stand your hair on end.

Once in awhile, we've briefly discussed regenerating the guinea flock with some new blood. It takes but a few moments of exposure to their ear-splitting racket to cure that occasional, fleeting notion.

But, gee, that issue is now moot.

"Look! Baby guineas!," called an amazed Angie, as she spotted the surprise outside the barn in some tall grass before we started the evening milking. Sure enough, we counted five of the small, brown and striped chicks as their mother took them high-tailing toward the same forsythia cover that hid the last massacre.

When we didn't see them for the next few days, you can guess what we assumed, until we heard the mother calling her chicks and followed the screechy-wheel sound to the banks of the manure lagoon, where they were busy scratching among the weeds.

Just this morning, while feeding a new baby calf a bottle, I glanced out toward the garden. When the last of the three adult birds came wandering out of the garden's grassy back corner and into the mown alfalfa field, small bodies were right at her heels. They seem to be thriving.

Now I'm wondering. Could there be a fourth guinea parked somewhere on a nest hidden under a bush?

And, if so, will she have the sense to hatch before the first blizzard?

From Crates To Crafts

play they devised is on an old ironing board, artistically draped with a family quilt. For the upcoming Christmas season, the two will work together on crafting items of homemade gingerbread, from ornate houses to hand-decorated tree ornaments.

In keeping with the family-talent atmosphere of the shop, oil paintings by Cordelia's mother, Caroline Kline, are both part of the log house decorating scheme and the shop's one-of-a-kind merchandise.

Cordelia's pleasure with her business success thus far has been tempered by one major disappointment. While preparing to refurbish the structure as a shop, the Wolfes discovered that moisture had seeped behind the outer sealing material of the old logs and caused deterioration in some spots. To prevent further damage, they have covered the logs with a stucco exterior.

But the interios remains unchanged, the aged logs now serving as a background for the likes of ironwork and cookie-cutter angels, tart burners and folk Raggedy Ann dolls, coverlets and bobbin lamps.

Cordelia's enjoyment of the shop is apparent as she chats with customers while wrapping their purchases in colorful gift paper and ringing up the cash register she is still getting acclimated to using. Bookkeeping takes more time than she initially expected, and a computer may someday be enlisted to help speed the process.

Meanwhile, Cordelia is enjoying her new career on the Wolfe Family farm and taking pleasure in the new use she has found for those lonely, abandoned chicken crates.

Raffia and Ribbon Log House Gift Shoppe is located off Route 111 South of Loganville (Old Susquehanna Trail). Right on West Springfield Lane, to corner of Yellow Church Road and West Springfield Lane.

Consumer Red Alert

Consumer scams are alive and well in the United States. Any one of us can be a victim of a fraudulent claim if we don't take the time to stay informed and reduce our vulnerabiilty. Some of us are more vulnerable than others. While senior citizens make up only 15 percent of the population, they comprise more than 30 percent of the identified consumer fraud victims. And some fields are more prone to fraud than others. The often the criminals are already out-of-town, on their way to another kind of illegal operation.

Some of the predictable seasonal scams that occur this time of year include inflated costs for furnace repairs, replacement windows, and driveway repairs. Salespeople or repairmen will "be in the area" doing work and offer a free estimate or inspection. With furnace inspections, this is often followed with some doom-and-gloom news about how dangerous your current situation is. They'll say you need to immediately replace equipment (and offer it at skyrocket prices). They may also say they are replacing and charge you for an entire flue liner but only replace the first and last foot or two.

Some window sales representatives start by offering a seriously inflated price on a product. Then they will discount it by a third with things like senior citizen rates, specials if you order today, etc. This lowers the price and makes the purchase look like a bargain. Sadly, the product may still be well-over-priced. Always do price comparisons. With any repair, try to work with a local company. Does the company have an address on its contracts? Vehicles? How long has it been in the area? A guarantee for work is of little use to the consumer if the workers cannot be tracked down. Be on your toes, and help friends to watch for the illegitimate "businesses."

Along with these more well-known kinds of fraud are some lesser-known, emerging ones. The latest fraud description to cross my desk is one that involves phone numbers with an "809" area code. This scam uses emergency messages to coerce consumers into dialing costly international pay-per-call phone numbers. These messages arrive by phone, pager, and computer e-mail. Recipients may be urged to call an "809" number to "avoid immediate court action" on an overdue account, may insinuate that a family member is desparately trying to contact them, or may advertise telemarketing and telecommunications fields are ripe for crime. Consumer Reports documents that every year consumers lose $40 billion to telemarketing fraud. Home repairs and home services are other areas where fraud can occur easily.

Fortunately some laws are being enacted to help decrease the amount of fraud occurring. However, the government is unable to stay ahead of all the scam artists. By the time a scam has surfaced, an overseas job opportunity. When people call, they get a lengthy recording.

Although it looks like the person is calling an area code in the United States, they are actually calling the Caribbean. Although they are billed at international rates that may be as high as $25 per minutes, these numbers don't contain the usual "011" prefix for international calls. The United States government can do a lot to control fraud within the country; it has little power to influence illegal activities outside its borders. So the individual consumer needs to be an informed watchdog! If you receive a message with an unfamiliar phone number, especially one that seems urgent and threatening, read it twice. Check the number. Unless you are planning a Caribbean vacation or have family living in the region, don't call an "809" phone number. Keep track of your outstanding debts. Write down a contact person's name, phone number, and company name so that people can't trick you with unfounded threats. And just like we teach young children, have passwords for family members. If there is a serious emergency, their use of this word in conjunction with a message can help you sort out a made-up message from a real one.

Finally, if you suspect fraud of any kind — make a phone call or send a copy of the printed materials to your local office of Consumer Protection. The employees there will help you to sort out whether or not it is information that should be forwarded to the state attorney general's office.

Tribute To Classic Farm Tractor By Well-Known Photographer

STILLWATER, Minn. — Farm tractors are a trendy, new collectible, supported by a multimillion dollar industry of restorers, shows, and auctions. Vintage Farm Tractors (Town Squar Books, $29.95) by Ralph Sanders is the ultimate tribute to classic tractors with in-depth coverage and outstanding photos of all the famous models with many never-before-seen tractors, prototypes, and rare variations. Packed with colorful anecdotes of the genius inventors and pioneering companies that created those machines, Vintage Farm Tractors is the greatest history of tractors ever assembled.

Sanders is probably the world's best-known farm tractor photographer, revered for his annual DuPont Classic Farm Tractor calendar, which has a print run of 280,000. He was born and raised on a central Illinois farm near Stonington, where he grew up working some of the machines tractor collectors now seek. Over the years Ralph's agricultural photographic work has included assignments for Successful Farming, Deere and Co., Massey-Ferguson, Monsanto Ag, and many others.

Sanders spent eight years collecting and shooting the photographs that make up Vintage Farm Tractors. He provides a depth of detail for tractor buffs and restorers not available in other books, and includes historical ads, brochures, and black-and-white photos as interesting reference points.

Bring Back The Joy In The Holidays!

As the holidays approach, many of us find ourselves enjoying the season less because of the extra stress factors associated with this time of year. It is true that the holidays bring back more work into our already busy lives, however, with careful planning and organizaiton, the holidays can be enjoyable.

Before the planning stage gets underway, think about the following general guidelines to ease the stress.

• Be realistis. Set achievable goals. Don't expect to be happy every minutre or for everything to be perfect.

• Set priorities. Take a hard look at how you have spent holiday time in the past. Eliminate elements that aren't important to you or your family.

• Simplify. Do you really need to serve three desserts? Can you scale back on gift-giving? Some families draw names from a hat and have each member buy one gift for that person whose name they pull.

• Enlist the help of others. Mothers often carry an unfair burden of holiday responsibilities. Ask other family members and friends to help.

• Take care of yourself. Try not to eat or drink too much. Keep your sleep schedule as regular as possible. Take time for long walks or hot baths.

• Get social support. Spent time with those you care about. If you are loney, seek out people and groups who make the holidays warmer.

The key to managing holiday stress is to get organized. The holidays will run more smoothly if you start the planning at least eight weeks in advance. Buy a small tablet and start a "To Do" checklist to keep you on track. Separate the checklists by weeks, starting with week eight and counting down to week one. Suggestions for the lists are as follows:

Week 8

• Make a master list of everything you have to do before the holidays: gift and grocery shopping, cleaning, wrapping, and so on. Leave plenty of room for additions to this list.

• Write out your gift-giving list. Leave space for changes or additions.

• If you plan to give holiday plants as gifts, buy the bulbs now.

• Purchase cards, stamps, ribbons, wrapping paper.

Week 7

• Plan a budget for this year's entertaining and gift giving.

• Start planning holiday parties with a guest list, menu, and equipment to rent, if necessary. Buy invitations.

• Start any projects you plant to give as gifts.

Week 6

• Devise a manageable list for sending out holiday cards. Divide the number of cards by 14, then complete that number every night for the next two weeks.

• Inspect that year's decorations, lights, and tree trimmings to check what you need to replenish.

• Plan your Thanksgiving day menu, make a shopping list and inspect table linens, glassware, serving dishes. If anything needs to be mended, polished, washed, or replaced, do it now.

Week 5

• Give your home a preholiday cleaning, then decorate.

• Have a happy Thanksgiving, and make sure everyone helps with cleanup.

• Firm up your gift-giving list. Order from catalogs now for best selection.

• Buy a small supply of generic gifts to keep on hand for emergencies.

Week 4

• Plan all holiday dinner menus and make a list of all food items, supplies, such as paper products, napkins, and serving equipment needed.

• Clean out the freezer to make space for holiday cookies and other foods.

• Make a "Holiday Helpers" chart and divide chores in family.

• Put up outdoor lights and decorations.

Week 3

• Set up a gift wrapping corner with gifts, paper, fabric, ribbons, tape and tags. Wrap and send gifts that need to be shipped.

• Decorate the inside of the house.

• Buy Christmas tree and garlands. Cut off about ¼ inch of the tree stump and set it in a bucket of water in the garage.

• Place order for fresh turkey or any special roast.

Week 2

• Finalize the Christmas menu.

• Put up the tree. (Be sure to keep the tree stand full of water). Have a family tree-trimming party.

• Cook special dishes, place in containers, label and freeze.

• Buy and pick up frozen turkey.

• Buy film and batteries.

Week 1

• Buy perishable groceries.

• Take time to "de-stress." Go to a movie, have your nails done, take a hot bath. You deserve it!

Christmas Eve

• Remove any frozen dishes from the freezer and defrost in the refrigerator. Prepare cold dishes and refrigerate. Set the dinner table.

Have a Merry Christmas!

'Knead' A Bread Recipe?

Isn't fresh baked bread remarkable? The aroma of oven-fresh bread or that first bite of a warm sugar-kissed sweet roll remind us how satisfying life's simple pleasures really are.

Today's recipes include hand kneaded breads, quick breads, and ideas to dress up frozen bread dough.

If you have a time-crunched schedule, use time-saving products like frozen bread dough to produce special treats like Grandma used to bake.

Expect raves!

Featured Recipe

Today's featured recipe comes from the hot-off-the-press cookbook, "The Fruitful Vine," released by Hinkletown Mennonite Church.

The attractively printed 320-page cookbook includes many old and new favorites from members of the church.

For a copy of the cookbook, send $15, which includes the cost of shipping and handling, to Barbara Martin, 200 Speedwell Forge Rd., Lititz, PA 17543.

Here is a recipe from the cookbook that offers an unique twist to kneading bread.

BREAD IN A BAG

2 cups bread flour
1 package Rapid Rise yeast
3 tablespoons sugar
3 tablespoons nonfat fry milk
1 teaspoon salt
1 cup hot water (125-130-degrees)
3 tablespoons vegetable oil
1 cup whole wheat flour

Combine 1 cup bread flour, undissolved yeast, sugar, dry milk, and salt in 1-gallon heavy duty zipper lock freezer bag. Squeeze upper part of bag to force out air. Shake and work bag with fingers to blend ingredients. Add hot water and oil to dry ingredients. Reseal bag. Mix by working bag with fingers. Add whole wheat flour, reseal bag and mix thoroughly. Gradually add enough remaining all-purpose flour to make a stiff dough that pulls away from bag. On floured surface, knead dough 2 to 4 minutes until smooth and elastic. Cover dough; rest 10 minutes. Shape into loaf shape. Place in oiled loaf pan. Place large shallow pan on counter; half fill with boiling water. Place baking sheet over shallow pan; let dough rise 20 minutes or until double in size. Makes one loaf. Pan size 8½ x4½ x2¼ -inches. Preheat oven to 375 degrees.

Cooking time: 25 minutes or until done.

Soil Test During Indian Summer

"If we don't get a good Indian Summer in October and November, we will get it during winter."

Great and small gardeners may not want to wait til the next Indian Summer to soil test. Soil test results determine the need for fertilizer for your lawn and garden. Test your garden soil while the soil is moist, friable, and easy to dig.

There are several advantages to fall soil testing. The soil testing lab can process your sample faster than during the spring rush (about 10-20 days). And, fertilizer is a better buy in the fall when dealers try to reduce stock before the end of the year.

Test soil that is representative of your growing area. To take a good soil sample, remove soil 4 to 6" deep in at least 12 different spots. Use a shovel, trowel or soil probe. All the small samples from the 12 spots are mixed together to represent soil from the whole area. After the soil has been air-dried by letting sit for a couple of days in a paper bag, a smaller quantity of the soil is sent to the lab for analysis.

If you are going to be growing different trees and shrubs in several areas it is often desirable to have separate tests for each location. Different crops, garden, lawn, flower bed, etc. require a different soil test kit.

Purchase your soil test kit, actually a mailing package, from your local county Extension office. Fill out the questionnaire in the kit completely. Fill out the correct crop code for the plants you intend to fertilize.

The test results will supply you with the soil pH, as well as the amount of phosphorus, potassium, calcium, and magensium in the sample. The report will specify how much lime and fertilizer will be needed to match the needs of the growing plants.

Great and small gardeners looking to regrade or fill in part of their property this fall should be wary of offers of free or inexpensive "clean fill." Construction and demolition debris offered as clean fill may not be so clean.

When it comes to clean fill, the caveat emptour or buyer's beware rule definitely applies. Be cautious when accepting fill material that is not natural soil. Try to find the source of material. If there is any doubt about the material, do not accept it.

6 medium tomatoes
1 teaspoon salt
½ cup sugar

ANSWER — A missionary in Albania needed a good hot dog and hamburger bun recipe because she is unable to buy the buns in Albania. Thanks to Anna Martin, Denver, for sending a recipe.

Five-Star Hamburger Buns

⅝ cup water
1 egg
½ teaspoon salt
3 tablespoons shortening
3 tablespoons sugar
1⅓ cups all-purpose flour
⅔ cup whole wheat flour
2 teaspoons active dry yeast

Place dough ingredients in bread pan. When the dough has risen long enough, turn out dough onto a lightly floured countertop or cutting board. Gently roll and shape the dough onto a 12-inch rope. With a sharp knife, divide dough into seven pieces for hamburger buns or 8 pieces for hot dog buns. Grease a baking sheet. Roll pieces of dough into balls and flatten for hamburger buns or shape into 6-inch rolls for hot dog buns. Place on prepared baking sheet. Cover and let rise in a warm oven 10 to 15 minutes until almost doubled (Hint: To warm oven slightly, turn oven on warm setting for one minute, then turn off, and place covered dough in oven to rise. Remove sheet from oven to preheat).

Preheat oven to 400 degrees. Bake 12 to 15 minutes until golden brown. Remove from oven and cool on racks. When ready to use, split buns in half horizontally. These will keep in a plastic bag in the freezer for 3 to 4 weeks.

ANSWER — For the reader who had requested a recipe for a brandy starter, here is one from L. Littlehole, Marietta.

Brandy Starter

In a one gallon glass jar, combine 1 cup cubed canned pineapple, 1 cup sugar, and 2 tablespoons brandy. Let these ingredients sit in the jar for two weeks, stirring daily. At the end of the two weeks, add 1 cup maraschino cherries (including juice), 1 cup sugar, and 2 tablespoons brandy.

Let the mixture sit for two more weeks, stirring daily. The fourth week, add 1 cup sliced canned peaches (including juice), 1 cup sugar, and 2 tablespoons brandy. Let the mixture sit for two weeks, stirring daily.

Separate the liquid from the fruit. The liquid is the starter. Use the fruit on ice cream or cake. Do not refrigerate the starter liquid.

ANSWER — Anna Bryan, Oxford, N.J., wanted a recipe for Italian Spaghetti Sauce made from fresh tomatoes to freeze. She also asked if it can be canned with sausage and meatballs. Here is a recipe to can from the Penn State Extension Service. If you want to freeze it, skip the canning process and freeze.

Spaghetti Sauce With Meat

30 pounds tomatoes
2½ pounds ground beef or sausage
5 cloves garlic, minced
1 cup chopped onions
1 cup chopped celery or green peppers
1 pound fresh mushrooms, sliced (optional)
4½ teaspoons salt
2 tablespoons oregano
4 tablespoons minced parsley
2 teaspoons black pepper
¼ cup brown sugar

Yields: about 9 pints.

Wash tomatoes and dip in boiling water for 30 to 60 seconds or until skins split. Dip in cold water and slip off skins. Remove cores and quarter tomatoes. Boil 20 minutes, uncovered, in large saucepan. Put through food mill or sieve. Saute beef or sausage until brown. Add garlic, onion, celery or green pepper, and mushrooms, if desired. Cook until vegetables are tender. Combine with tomato pulp in large saucepan. Add spices, salt, and sugar. bring to a boil. Simmer, uncovered, until thick enough for serving. At this time initial volume will have been reduced by nearly one-half. Stir frequently to avoid burning. Fill jars, leaving 1-inch headspace. Adjust lids and process in pressure canner at 11 pounds pressure — pints 60 minutes or quarts 70 minutes.

RAISIN SCONES

2 cups all-purpose flour
2 teaspoons baking powder
½ teaspoon baking soda
½ teaspoon ground nutmeg
½ teaspoon salt
8 tablespoons unsalted butter, cut
1 cup raisins
2 tablespoons granulated sugar
1 large egg yolk
¾ cup buttermilk or plain yogurt
1 large egg white
Additional sugar for sprinkling

Heat oven to 375 degrees. Combine flour, baking powder, baking soda, nutmeg, and salt in large bowl, stir well. Add butter and cut in with pastry cutter or rub in with fingers until mixture looks like fine granules. Add raisins and sugar. Toss to distribute evenly.

Add egg yolk to buttermilk in a measuring cup and whisk with fork to blend. Pour over flour mixture and stir with fork until soft dough forms.

Turn out dough onto a slightly floured surface and give 10 to 12 kneads. Cut dough in half. Knead each half briefly into a ball, turn smooth side up and pat into a 6-inch circle. Cut into six wedges but do not separate wedges.

In a small bowl, beat the egg whites with fork until broken up. Brush top of each scone with egg white and sprinkle lightly with sugar. With a stiff spatula, transfer the two circles onto an ungreased cookie sheet, reshaping so that wedges in each is touching to keep raisins from burning.

Bake 18-22 minutes until medium brown. Cool on rack for 5 minutes then pull wedges apart and cover loosely with a dish towel.

Product Makes School Lunch "Kooler"

COLUMBUS, Ohio — Moo Kooler™, a line of branded, 2% flavored milk packaged in convenient, 12-ounce recyclable plastic containers, has expanded its market from grocery store shelves to the school lunch room.

Moo Kooler is available in four flavors, including ChocoBoom™ (chocolate fudge), ChocoKool™ (chocolate mint), VanillaZilla™ (vanilla) and OrangeSlide™ (orange vanilla).

The American Dairy Association & Dairy Council Mid East is test marketing the product in middle and secondary schools in Columbus and Cleveland, Ohio and in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The test market program provides the opportunity for kids to sample the product during the school lunch period, and enables school food service directors to evaluate the integration of this product into their school meal program.

According to research, today's kids are making independent choices when it comes to what they eat and drink at school. A recent survey conducted by Teenage Research Unlimited, funded by the National Dairy Concil, reveals that 61 percent of teens buy their own snacks and 70 percent of adolescents buy lunch at school.

Milk is a standard component in the national school lunch program to provide a good source of calcium to students, however most middle and secondary schools offer an "a la carte" meal program, which allows students to pick and choose from a variety of foods and beverages. According to Mary Anne Weber, M.S., R.D., and manager of nutrition services for Cleveland City Schools, "An overwhelming number of students choose punch drinks rather than milk with their meal.

"When children do choose milk, 95 percent of the time it's chocolate milk," she said. As a registered dietitian, Weber understands that kids need milk to meet their needs for calcium and vitamin D, helping to combat the growing calcium crisis. Weber believes Moo Kooler will make milk more appealing to kids.

"Moo Koolers provide a tasty and nutritious choice for kids at school," said Frank Christina, vice president and sales manager for Dean Foods, a primary dairy supplier to Pittsburgh area schools. He said that many area schools plan to offer Moo Kooler this fall. The Cleveland City Schools plan to launch the product in 40 middle schools during National School Lunch Week, the second week in October.

A survey of some of the nation's key health leaders focusing on children's nutrition found that 80 percent of the respondents say children are not getting enough calcium in their diets. Teens need four servings of milk or milk products each day, yet the United States Department of Agriculture reports that adolescent boys consume only one and one quarter cups of milk each day, while girls drink even less — not even a cup. At the same time, consumption of beverages providing little-to-no nutritional value, such as soda pops, are on the rise. In fact, the average teenage boys drinks more than four cups of soda in a single day, while girls consume approximately three glasses of soda daily, according to Teenage Research Unlimited.

Kitchen Is Home For Calf

JOYCE BUPP
York Co. Correspondent

EAST BERLIN (York Co.) — How many people do you know who have a calf living in their house?

Probably none.

But 16-year-old Jason and 14-year-old Jess Stambaugh, who live with their parents on a York County dairy farm, realy do have a calf living in their house. The heifer is a very tiny Ayrshire, which was born two months early to one of Jason's 4-H project animals.

Her home, since she was born on October 2, has been in a large, wooden pen, lined with heavy plastic and a thick layer of clean sawdust. Jess built the wide box so the calf could be kept in the warm kitchen of the Stambaugh family's farm house.

This tiny calf weighed less than 20 pounds when her mother gave birth to her very early in the morning. The Stambaugh brothers and their father, Jeff, found the calf when they went to the barn to milk at 4 a.m. They quickly cleaned her up, wrapped her in some of their own clothes and rushed her to the house.

"It looked like she had a buzz haircut," is how Jason describes the calf's appearance. Although brown markings were visible on her skin, the calf had no hair other than a light coating of fuzz.

Dianna Stambaugh bundled the calf in blankets to keep it warm. As soon as the nearby convenience store opened at 6 a.m., they bought a baby bottle so they could feed her. For the next several days and nights, Dianna fed the tiny heifer two ounces of warm milk every two hours. The first night, she sat on their rocking chair in the living room all night long with the calf snuggled next to her in blankets, until its body warmed enough to stop shivering.

Baby calves born early, or premature, very often do not survive because their bodies are too small and weak to resist disease. The Stambaugh's herd veterinarian has been checking the calf about once very week, but it has received no medical treatment other than a normal, newborn-calf vaccination. To help keep her safe from germs which could make her sick, the Stambaughs are asking most people not to visit the tiny calf.

Despite all the odds against her living, the Stambaugh's house calf is doing very well. She now drinks 15 ounces of milk four times a day and weighed 26 pounds when she was eighteen days old. Her hair coat is growing and feels very soft and silky. The Stambaughs have stopped covering her with a blanket while she sleeps so that her own hair coat continues to get longer to keep her warm.

Like many human babies, she has a soft, stuffed animal to snuggle up with in her sawdust-filled pen. Both the little heifer and her pen are kept very clean and odor-free.

While her sawdust is being changed daily, the baby calf is allowed to run around the house. She enjoys looking at her reflection in the shiny, black-glass door of the Stambaugh's kitchen stove and stops to sniff at furniture, shoes, and clothes.

The Stambaugh's golden labrador retriever, Lady, frequently tries to "mother" the baby calf, staying close to it while it plays and licking it clean with her tongue. On a few very warm, sunny afternoons, the calf has even been let out to play in the grass for a little while.

With winter coming, Jess and Jason expect their house calf to be part of the household for the next several months. But if she keeps growing as well as she has the first few weeks, sometime the tiny calf could become one of Jason's 4-H show animals like her mother, Triple-J Ace Jasman.

Jason and Jess each own about 30 registered Ayrshires and have been very successful in showing them. In September, Jess' four-year-old, Goodies Ann Corben Alice, took first place in her class at the Junior All-American show at Harrisburg.

Jason has also enjoyed a very successful show year with his animals. His two-year-old, Don-Sher Astro Anne, was selected champion at the district 4-H show. Jess' Alice was the reserve grand champion.

Jason and Jess are students at Spring Grove Area High School, where Jason is in the tenth grade and Jess in ninth. The brothers get up early, before school, to do the milking of the 35 cows. Both look forward to becoming dairy farmers when they have completed their educations.

The pampered calf takes a snooze on a living room rug.

Cookbook Raises Funds For Church

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

EPHRATA (Lancaster Co.) — A new cookbook has just been released. Called the Fruitful Vine, the cookbook features 578 recipes from members of Hinkletown Mennonite Church.

As in most cases of church cookbooks, this one is a fund raiser for the church's building program. To raise the monies needed for the church addition, each Sunday school class was asked to undertake a money-making project.

The cookbook project fell into the Faithful Servants class by default. Another class had been planning to adopt the cookbook project but decided it would be too much work.

The Faithful Servants were not deterred by the hard work. They divided the work among four committees composed of the 24 couples who make up the class.

The art committee selected the name and illustrations featured in each category.

The undertaking almost came to a standstill when the recipe collection committee had only received five recipes within the first two weeks. A bit nervously, they decided to wait a few more weeks. The wait was indeed fruitful. Enough recipes were compiled to fill a 320-page book.

"People submitted between two and 25 recipes each," said Barb Martin, a committee member.

The proof reading committee corrected the handwritten recipes, which were mailed to Keepsake Cookbooks in Tenn. The company typeset the recipes and sent the dummy pages back to again be read by the proof reading committee.

The corrected version was mailed back to the cookbook company which printed 1,071 copies.

The sales committee is now in charge of selling the attractively printed spiral-bound cookbook. The recipes are easy to read in dark blue print on white pages.

Pressed Flowers Etch Lasting Impressions

LOU ANN GOOD
Lancaster Farming Staff

LEBANON (Lebanon Co.) — Delicate pressed flowers in every color and hue flicker remembrances of summer's beauty or of Casey Pakola's trips to distant lands.

As Pakola flips through her carefully arranged cardboard flats separating the pressed flowers, she exclaims, "Oh, this one I found on a walk through the neighborhood" or "Look how nicely these artemesia stems dried. If I join these together, they will form a nice heart shape."

With these delicate specimens of nature, Pakola designs her own greeting cards and candles.

"I became interested in pressed flowers because I wanted to make my own cards," Pakola said of her persistence to find just the right card for friends and family.

Too often, if she liked the design of the card, the inside verse lacked her approval or vice versa.

Now that Pakola designs her own cards, she can print any message she wants inside.

"It gives me a chance to read poetry," she said of her search to find appropriate expression for the occasion.

Carrying a book of poetry with her also serves another purpose. Whenever Pakola spies an unusual blossom or leaf, she tucks it inside the pages of the book until she is able to transfer it to her drying source.

Although she has a dried flower press, Pakola said that "Telephone books, porous paper such as newsprint — the cheaper the better."

"Do not use books with shiny pages or wax paper or textured paper towels," she cautions. These keep the flowers from drying properly or let marks on the specimens.

After carefully inserting the flowers between the pages of a book, close it and set additional books on top of it for weight.

Flat flowers such as pansies and cherry blossoms can easily be pressed whole, but roses and other flowers with bulk can be dried by separating petals and later arranging and gluing the petals into flower shapes.

Be sure to dry stems and leaves of flowers also for that completed appearance. Maple leaf buds and wild grasses work well in pressed arrangements.

Flowers such as larkspur, pansy, coxcomb, heather, delphinium, and forget-me-not flowers retain their natural color. Wisteria, pale wild violet, sweet peas, lily-of-the-valley, are more delicate and often turn cream or sepia in color. Yellow and orange flowers rarely change color when dried. Some darker reds will turn almost black. Blues can be tricky, but Pakola said that part of the fun of pressing flowers is to experiment and see the final result.

She never throws anything away and has even dry-brushed flowers to reach the desired shade.

The pressed flowers require about two weeks drying time, sometimes four depending on the thickness of the flower.

When ready to arrange on cards, glass, or candles, select the flowers, stems and leaves.

It's a good idea to lay out the arrangement before using the glue in case changes need to be made. Simple designs generally are more eye appealing, but fill pieces add interest and depth to the arrangement. Use plant material in the same scale as the frame or card.

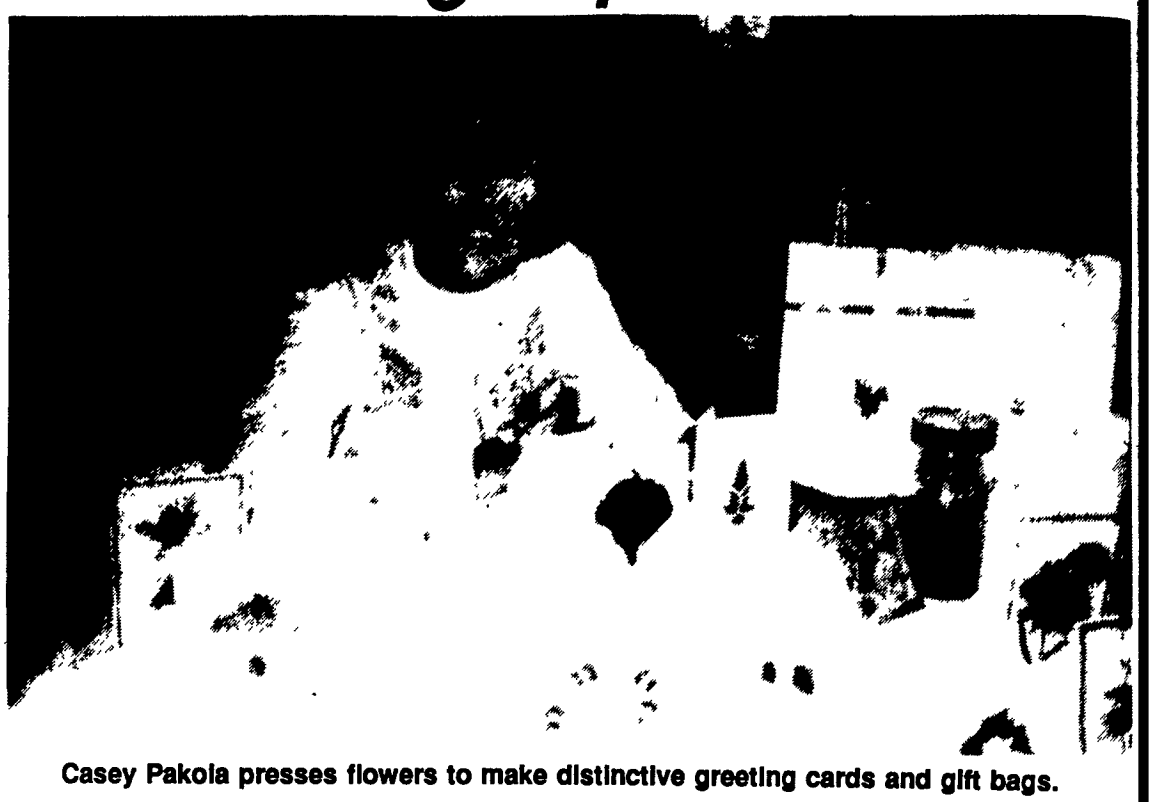
Apply a thin coat of glue or Modge Podge over the area where the plant material will be placed.

Gently place the plant material over the wet glue and press the material onto glue. Allow to dry completely.

The glue will adhere the pressed plant material to the surface. When dry, gently apply another coat of glue or Modge Podge over the surface of the pressed plant material. This seals the plant material to the surface. Allow to dry completely. If desired, more coats may be given, but make sure glue is completely dried before recoating. When design is finished, allow to dry a full 24 hours lying flat.

From Pakola's extensive collection of flowers it's difficult to believe that she only began this hobby a year ago. It was through her work with the Master Gardener program at the Lebanon County Cooperative Extension office, that Pakola with the help of Debbie Hartman developed the steps to teach others the art of pressed flower.

A display table of Pakola's work and others will be set up during the Lebanon County Holiday Extension Program held Nov. 5-7, at the Lebanon Valley Exposition Grounds. Complete instructions will be available and Pakola and other master gardeners will be available to answer questions. However, reservations and a registration fee are required to attend the day-long or evening sessions available Call (717) 270-4391 for more details.



Casey Pakola presses flowers to make distinctive greeting cards and gift bags.

Pakola combines stones and flowers that she has collected on hikes to make a lasting momento for herself and for friends.

A lampshade with pressed flowers coordinates with the dried flowers encassed in a clear glass lampstand.

These delicate specimen's of nature are enhanced by using blank cards with a border design.

Potassium key in blood pressure

How does potassium help with blood pressure?

If you're diagnosed with high blood pressure your doctor is likely to suggest more bananas and potatoes in your diet because they have hefty portions of potassium. That's important because some blood pressure medications have an unfortunate side-effect — they cause potassium levels to dip. If you're on the borderline with your potassium consumption, you might find yourself with a deficiency right when you could use a boost.

Why? Numerous studies link higher levels of potassium with lower blood pressure. But as usual when talking about the human body, the relationship isn't simple. It appears that a balance of four minerals -- potassium, sodium, calcium and magnesium -- work together maintain a normal blood pressure and heartbeat.

Unlike sodium which is usually found in fluid outside of cells, potassium almost always stays within cells helping muscles contract, nerves send messages and in general helping cells do what they are supposed to do. Potassium also assists the body in maintaining a proper fluid balance. That is if there's too much fluid, potassium works to get rid of it by sending it to the bladder (and sending you to the bathroom). This can affect blood pressure because as the body gets rid of excess water, excess sodium goes right along with it.

Sodium has been linked with blood pressure for years, although not everyone reacts to sodium in the same way. Many people can consume as much salt as they want without affecting their blood pressure. But, for the 5 percent to 15 percent of us who are salt-sensitive, more sodium can easily mean higher blood pressure.

Some research indicates that even salt sensitive people can protect themselves from sodium by consuming high levels of potassium. That theory isn't firmly established though. If you've already got high blood pressure you should be certain to discuss any changes in your diet with your doctor so your medication can be adjusted if necessary.

Foods high in potassium include fruits (especially bananas) and vegetables and their juices, baked potatoes and yams, milk, carrot juice, raisins, fish, lean meat and beans. Steaming fruits and vegetables tends to help them retain more potassium than boiling.

Lancaster County has so many tourist attractions. And, over the years we have visited almost all of them. Only recent did we cross off the list a roller mill at Mascot.

This stone mill was built in 1760 on Mill Creek. It was operated until 1977 when the Ressler Mill Foundation was established to preserve it. Originally two large wooden overshot water wheels turned the millstones. Now it is run by water powered turbine and chilled iron roller mills.

I've always been interested in mills as two of my great, great grandparents owned or built nearby mills. Some mills are left to fall into ruin but the Oregon Mill has been updated into business offices. My ancestor, Benjamin Landis, owned this mill from 1836 to 1844, and I have his mill record books that show some bills were not paid for years. But, then a $12 copper kettle, a $16 boar and sow or 5 bushel of apples for $1 were given for payment. A few widows' names also appeared on the books and sometimes their bills were never paid.

The Rome Mill near Lititz features a five-ton 22-foot water wheel which ground flour for the Moravian Community in 1757. By using 3 sets of stones the mill could produce 25 barrels of flour daily.

My first experience with a mill was when as a child my father put me high up on the seat of his two-horse Columbia box-wagon and we drove to a nearby mill. The corn that we dried in the oven of our wood stove was shelled and then ground into cornmeal. This was a staple of our diet all winter. We had mush and milk for supper and for breakfast we had fried mush with molasses or pork pudding.

Now we buy expensive cereal and eat it with milk and our own canned or frozen fruit.

Kitchen Kettle Preserves Jams, Jellies And Farms

INTERCOURSE (Lancaster Co.) — Kitchen Kettle Village of Intercourse works to preserve not only its jellies, relishes, and preserves but also the farms in the county.

The Village has formed a Circle of Friends program—a venture that benefits the Lancaster Farmland Preservation Trust—by raising funds through the ongoing construction of a commemorative patio and walkway in the center of Kitchen Kettle Village.

Sponsors are asked to donate a minimum of $69 for the purchase of an engraved brick that incorporates their name and year of sponsorship. Of this amount, $59 covers the cost and installation of the brick and the remainder of the donation goes directly to Farmland Trust, a non-profit group that has already preserved thousands of acres of farmland for future generations.

In addition to being the source of the world's most widely eaten meat, pigs play an important role in modern medicine. From heart valves for human hearts and insulin for diabetics, to treatment for massive burns, pig parts are saving lives and helping thousands of Americans maintain healthy lifestyles.

(NAPS)—Last year in the United States, more than 200,000 pork producers raised nearly 95.6 million hogs that yielded 17.4 billion pounds of pork. The United States ranks second world-wide in its per capita consumption of pork, and according to the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, pork is the world's most widely-eaten meat. But, nutrition is only one way pigs contribute to human well-being.

Scientists continue to develop new methods of improving human health. Surprisingly, one key contributor to medical progress is the pig. In addition to providing nutritious, economical food, pigs play an important role in the development and practice of modem medicine.

Because the proteins in their tissue have an amino acid structure similar to that of humans, pigs are often used in medical research to determine the effectiveness of various innovations, before the innovations are used on humans. Pigs not only serve as a valuable way to practice medical techniques, they also contribute to those innovations.

When human hearts suffer disease and injury, heart valves from pigs can be transplanted to prolong life. Since the first operation in 1971, more than 250,000 human lives have been saved by this procedure. Researchers at Duke Medical Center went one step further recently when they transplanted pig hearts into baboons. Some doctors estimate that the first transplants of porcine hearts into humans could come within the next few years.

A pig's pancreas also contributes to human health as an important source of insulin. Because the chemical structure of a pig's insulin resembles that of humans, it is easily accepted by the human system.

Burn victims have also benefited from the use of pigs. Pigskin is so similar to human skin, it is used as temporary skin to cover massive burns during the healing process.

An extract from the thyroid of a pig is used to regulate the rate of human metabolism. And researchers have developed a way of using materials from a pig's small intestine to help reconstruct damaged human arteries, veins, ligaments, and tendons. Scientists hope to test this material on humans sometime this year.

Even the liver of a pig has contributed to human health. By circulating human blood through a pig's liver, doctors have prolonged the lives of patients who were dying of liver failure—allowing the patients to live long enough to get a liver transplant. Doctors are hoping the technique might be improved so that it will be feasible to maintain patients in liver failure until a liver transplant becomes available or the patient's own liver heals.

In addition to medical and food uses, pigs contribute to a variety of products that make the lives of American consumers easier. From glue to upholstery, from glass to buttons, and from insulation to crayons, pig products contribute a wealth of practical uses for Americans.

Coupons A Lucrative Way To Save

RUTGERS, N.J. — According to the National Center for Financial Education (NCFE) in San Diego, there are two definitions for the word "over-spender." The first is the classic credit card abuser who overextends himself or herself by buying too much on plastic and taking years — even decades — to pay it off at high interest rates. The second definition of an over-spender is simply an individual who pays too much for goods and services, with little or no money left for savings.

Over-spending occurs daily in government, business and in millions of American households. Perhpas the number one reason is lack of motivation to save, followed by a close second — lack of specific knowledge about how to save. Over-spending for some individuals and families is almost habititual. It has been so many years since they have looked at their spending practices that they aren't even aware of the fact that money is wasted or how much accumulated over-spending has cost them over the years.

One area where considerable savings is possible is at the supermarket. The use of store and/or manufacturer coupons to reduce food and household item costs is often dismissed because it "takes too much time." Yet, on a cost per hour basis, coupon clipping provides a great return on your investment. This is especially true when coupons are doubled or when manufacturer coupons are combined with store sales and/or product rebates.

Let's use this example provided by the NCFE. Suppose your weekly grocery bill was $50 before coupons, which are doubled at a particular store. The coupon total was $8 ($16 with doubling), leaving a net supermarket tab of $34. Let's also suppose it takes about 20 minutes to cull through newspaper ads and your coupon collection to determine which items will be purchased during a shopping trip. If it takes about 20 minutes to save $16, that would equate to about $48 an hour. Pretty good income for just receiving grocery ads and promotions — and tax-free to boot!

If a person saves $16 per week with coupons, their annual savings would be $832 ($16x52) with about 17 hours of "labor." The bottom line is that planned grocery spending, including the use of coupons, can result in an excellent return on the time invested. There is no reason to have to overspend at the supermarket.

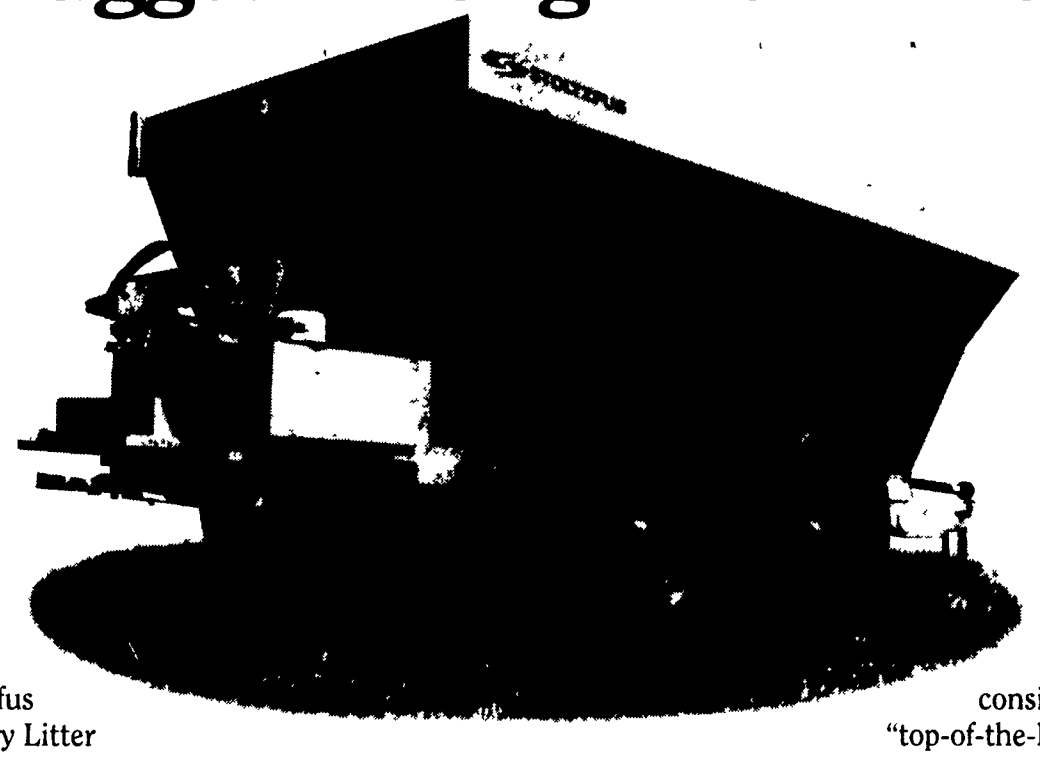
The One Spreader Big Enough For Poultry Litter, Rugged Enough For Lime.



The Stoltzfus Poultry Litter Spreader is specifically designed for the demands of this challenging job. The 20 foot hopper holds a whopping 400 cubic foot load, meaning fewer trips for you. The big 30-inch drag chain moves large volumes of litter fast. And the dual hydraulic spinners spread a wide, uniform pattern up to 40 feet wide.

ANSWER — Teeny Spillman of Maryland remembered an article in Lancaster Farming that described how to soak pine cones to make a colorful fire. She had misplaced the information. Thanks to Eva Burrell, Glen Gardner, N.J., Glenna Eisentrout and others for sending the information.

Colorful Burning Pinecones

1½ gallons hot water
3 plastic or ceramic containers, one for each color
½ pound copper sulfate for green flame
½ pound boric acid for crimson flame
½ pound calcium choloride for yellow or yellow-orange flame
Pinecones

Pour ½ gallon hot water into each container. Add one chemical to each container of hot water. Stir until chemicals are dissolved. Add pinecones and soak overnight. Allow pinecones to dry thoroughly in warm dry air for two days. Add cones to fire two or three at a time. The colorful flames will last only a short time.

Warning: Keep this solution out of the reach of small children and pets. The chemicals may be toxic.

Gregory Solt, Northampton County extension agent, writes that in addition to pine cones, wood shavings, pieces of wood, and other material may be dipped in the chemical solution. He suggests buying the chemicals through manufacturing chemists or hardwares stores as they are much higher if purchased chemically pure through drug stores.

His colors are a bit different than the ones listed above:

Green-boric acid. Turquoise-copper chloride. Blue-copper sulfate. Purple-potassium chloride. Red-strontium chloride. Orange-calcium chloride. Yellow-ordinary table salt.

FIVE EASY STEPS

The following five steps can be taken to reduce the cost of feeding and managing a beef cow herd, as well as possibly adding additional value to the calf crop:

1. Pregnancy checking the cow herd. There is no time in recent memory when it was more important to have a pregnancy check made of the cow herd. Low calf prices and high feed prices are the dangerous combination for profit, and feeding cows who are not going to return a calf to the enterprise will not be smart. There is no way a cow can remain open for a year and ever make up for not paying her way in a commercial cow herd. Get the vet out as soon as possible to get this job done. The trip through the chute to palpate is also a good time to give the needed fall vaccinations and examine the teeth, condition, and udders of the cows for any sign of problems.

2. Selection of replacement heifers. Turnover of the cow herd is best accomplished when calf prices are low. Many times cull cows can be traded dollar for dollar with bred heifers, and certainly cull cows can be traded for weanling heifers. Weaned heifers that are retained as replacements should be fed and managed differently if they are to be successful.

• Start by giving a vaccination with a modified-live form of IBR, BVD, PI3, and BRSV plus a booster to these heifers this fall. Each fall thereafter they can be boostered with a single shot of a killed bacterin.

• Feed them to gain sufficient weight to get bred on time next spring. Heifers that weigh 500 pounds now and are expected to weigh 1,200 pounds as mature cows should weigh about 750 pounds at breeding (60 percent of the mature weight.) There are about 180 days left to put on the 250 pounds they need, so feed them to gain about 1.4 pounds per day.

• Feed them right. The feed used to winter the cow herd is not suitable for growing heifers. The highest cost of feed is protein, so keep protein cost down by adding only what is needed to the ration for heifers. Get some help from your feed dealer or extension agent to design the best rations for the feeds you have.

3. Use the body condition of the cows to plan winter feeding. There is overwhelming evidence that body condition at calving will influence subsequent rebreeding rates. When the cows are in the chute to be palpated, simply put your hand on their ribs and sort them based on their condition. For more complete information, a condition scoring guide is available through many breed associations or your county extension office. Those cows with less condition (ribs hard and easily felt) should be fed differently (higher energy diets, such as a pound or two of corn every day in addition to their hay) than those with a smoother feel over the ribs. This does not mean fat cows are more desirable. If they get fat, you have probably wasted some expensive feed.

4. Use stalk fields for fall pasture. One of the most underutilized forage resources in this region is stalk fields. The following tips can make most efficient use of this feed:

• One acre can carry a cow for 40-50 days.

• Cows will selectively graze the best parts of the field first:: grain, leaves, then stalks.

• Use portable electric fences to strip graze the field by allowing ½ acre per cow for 25 days.

• Thin cows will need supplemental energy feed, and growing heifers will need supplemental protein while grazing stalks.

• Use a good commercial mineral mix or make one yourself that is 40 percent trace-mineralized salt, 40 percent dicalcium phosphate, and 20 percent of a commercial vitamin A premix with 5,000 IU of vitamin A per gram.

5. Buy feed based on nutritional value. In times of high feed cost, it becomes even more important to buy feed nutrients and not feed tonnage. When actual feed nutrient needs are known (for example, 1 pound of actual protein per head daily), the supplemental feed should be purchased that will meet the need at the lowest cost.

In the previous example, consider 44 percent soybean meal at $300 per ton. The daily cost of providing 1 pound of protein would be $.34 per cow ($300/2,000=$.15/pound X 2.27 pounds=$.34).

Now consider an alternative source such as whole soybeans at 40 percent protein. The cost to provide 1 pound of protein with the whole beans would be cheaper if they can be purchased for less than $330 per ton, which is roughly equivalent to $10 per bushel. This is the beauty of the beef cow — she can use all kinds of feed to accomplish the same end.

Some care must be taken to know the limits of feeding certain feeds, particularly food by-products. These few steps are examples of cost-cutting practices that are needed in a beef market like the one now in place. Take a few minutes to review your management and see if any of these steps can help put a few more dollars in your pocket.

POULTRY • POINTERS

HOW IMPORTANT IS IT TO CONTROL THE ENVIRONMENT FOR POULTRY?

William D. Weaver, Jr.
Prof. & Head
Dept. of Poultry Science

As geneticists have selected both laying and meat-type birds for higher rates of production, generally they have given up certain fitness traits.

Many times the price producers pay for improved feed efficiencies, growth rates, and egg production are decreased abilities of the birds to cope with insults and stresses from the environment.

The zone of thermoneutrality for one-day old chicks and poults is between 88 and 92 degrees F and decreases approximately ½ degree F each day until 70 degrees F is reached at approximately five weeks of age.

In the past, minor to moderate deviations in these temperatures would have had little effect on performance. However, today, even slight increases or decreases in temperature can in some cases cause drastic swings in efficiency and production. Illness and even death can result in severe cases.

"Environment" by definition means surroundings, or in the context of poultry the surroundings that are confined and maintained within the walls, ceiling, and floor of the poultry house. Generally, when the physical properties of the environment in the poultry house are defined, they are given as temperature, relative humidity, levels of certain gases, and dust, and in some instances, light.

However, from the practical standpoint, temperature and relative humidity are the two environmental properties that poultrymen are called upon to control (and ever more precisely, I should add) in their poultry houses.

In order to control both temperature and relative humidity in the poultry house, the house must be constructed so that these two properties can be provided at the proper levels and most efficiently. Construction must include adequate insulation to allow for efficient heating in the colder months and cooling in the warmer months. Construction must also minimize cracks and other unwanted openings to the outside so as to not only reduce heat loss and heat gain, but also allow for the efficient operation of (in most instances) the negative pressure ventilation system.

Ventilation is another term that has become analogous with environmental control. Negative pressure systems with controllable, and in many instances intermittent, rectangular shaped air inlets have become the norm for most poultry houses. More recently tunnel ventilation in conjunction with fogger nozzles or fogger pads has been added to primarily broiler houses to assist with cooling during the warmer months. Possibly the most open question currently involves the use of controllers in conjunction with the ventilation system.

Computerized controllers generally allow for the staging (usually based on temperature) of various functions in the poultry house (heaters, fans, cooling, etc.). When coupled with a computer, the controllers can store and recall historical information for use in decision making. Finally, when equipped with appropriate programmable software, these units are capable of making intelligent decisions such as turning off foggers when outside psychrometrics are not conducive for evaporative cooling, not allowing heating and ventilation systems to operate simultaneously, etc.

Possibly the weak link in environmental control systems used today involves the sensors. Although individual sensors can and do fail, the bigger weakness is that temperature is, by and large, the only environmental condition measured and used as an input when making decisions with environmental controllers.

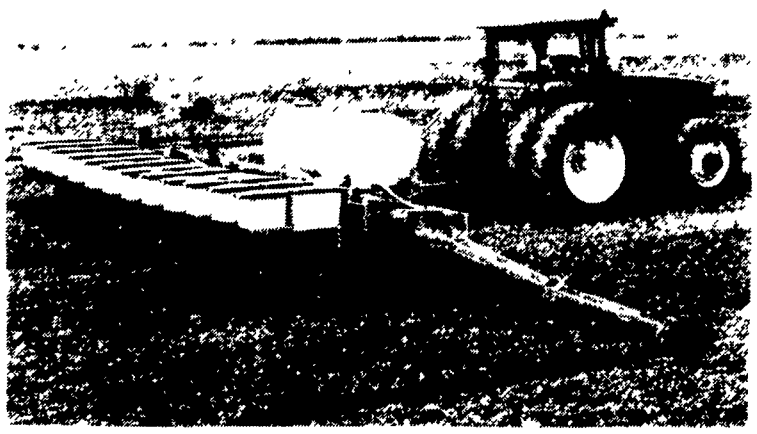
Planters Are Versatile



SALINA, Kan. — Great Plains introduces the new 1230 planters for no-till, min-till, or conventional planting. This folding planter features a 12-row unit with 30 inch spacing. The heavy duty double bar frame (7 inch x 7 inch and 5 feet x 7 feet) stacks for a narrow 15 feet 3 inch transport and width and a 12 feet 10 inch height.

The 1230 system offers excellent seed placement, even in uneven terrain with its 3-6-3 flex wing system. Accurate seed metering is achieved with the proven finger wheel pickup meters. Dual transmissions are conveniently located at the end of each toolbar for quick and simple adjustment. Contact drive wheels provide positive, accurate drives without the need for clutches. The short tongue design offers greater maneuverability and a reduced turning radius.

The unit features constant tongue weight, positive hydraulic lift system, row unit accessibility, and flat folding markers. Two bushel seed hoppers come standard and optional 70-pound chemical hoppers are available. Fertilizer and various row tillage attachments are also available as optional equipment.

Combines Get Performance Improvements

NEW HOLLAND (Lancaster Co.) — New Holland announces performance-enhancing changes in its Twin Rotor® combine line and redesignates the units as the TR™ 88 and TR™ 98.

The TR98 gets a horsepower boost to 270 hp and the 7.5 liter engine in both models is now air-to-air intercooled for improved efficiency and reduced emissions. Radiator and fan size also has been increased on both units. The TR 88 engine is 200 hp. Grain tank capacity is 190 bushels and 240 bushels respectively for the TR 88 TR 98.

New Holland, which introduced the first commercially successful rotary combines in 1975, noted that total harvesting capacity — the ability to put more grain in the tank in less time — places the Twin Rotor combines above any other brand. Rotary threshing means less grain damage, too, New Holland indicated.

New Holland announces performance-enhancing changes in its Twin Rotor® combine line and redesignates the units as the TR™ 88 and TR™ 98.

Some cab controls have been changed or relocated in the new combines adding to operator convenience and overall productivity. Easy-to-use electrical switches have replaced levers to engage the thresher, header and unloading systems. An air ride seat providing superior support and comfort for long hours of operation is now standard as is a large, more comfortable buddy seat.

Proven productivity-boosting features continue to be standard. The header/feeder reverser uses hydraulics to slowly move the header and feeder backward and forward to remove the worst slugs. A hardy rocker switch controls the reverser. Choose from a mechanical or electronic stone trap to protect the feeder and threshing mechanism.

Six versions of the two combines are available. The TR 98 can be equipped as a small grain, corn and soybean, rice and soybean, or universal unit. The TR 88 comes in small grain or corn and soybean configurations. A new feature is the standard high-speed rotor drive on the TR 98 universal model with two-speed rotor drive.

Patent Strengthens Ability To License, Exchange Technology

DEKALB, Ill. — Dekalb Genetics Corporation said that it has been granted a product patent (#5,550,318) from the U.S. Patent and Trademark Office directed to transgenic corn plants containing a bar or pat gene.

The presense of the bar or pat gene in corn confers resistance to the herbicide glufosinate. The bar or pat genes are also extensively used in corn transformation as selectable markers.

The patent used today is directed to the corn product itself and is not limited to any particular transformation method. Many transgenic corn products on the market or scheduled for commercial release contain the bar or pat gene either as a selectable marker (including several Bt products currently in the market) or to confer glufosinate resistance. This patent is related to an earlier Dekalb process patent (U.S. Patent #5,489,520) which is directed to methods for producing transgenic corn with the bar or pat gene, as well as the production and breeding of progeny of these plants.

Bruce P. Bickner Dekalb's chairman and chief executive officer, said, "The patent strengthens Dekalb's ability to license or exchange technology with other companies planning to market products containing either a bar or pat gene whether as a selectable marker or as a sourse of glufosinate resistance."

Glufosinate is a broad-spectrum, environmentally friendly herbicide that can be applied following emergence of a corn crop. Dekalb began marketing test quantities of a corn hybrid resistant to glufosinate this past spring. Both the U.S.Food and Drug Administration and the U.S. Department of Agriculture have completed their reviews of Dekalb's glufosinate-resistant corn, and the product now has all approvals required for commercial release in the U.S.

Glufosinate will be marketed in the United States under the trade name Liberty™. Its manufacturer, AgrEvo, anticipates that the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency will approve the herbicide's use on corn by the 1997 growing season.

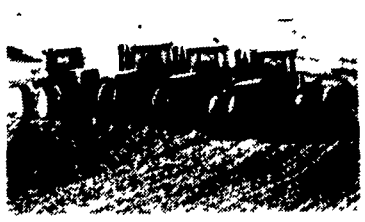
Tractors Feature More Power, Comfort

MOLINE, Ill. — John Deere's four new 9000 Series 4WD Tractors offer more power and performance, greater operator comfort and convenience, and easier servicing than the company's popular 70 Series models they replace.

Powered by John Deere PowerTech™ diesel engines, the Model 9100 is rated at 260 hp, the 9200 at 310 hp, the 9300 at 360 hp, and the 9400 at 425 hp.

The John Deere 9000 Series tractors comply with all 1996 EPA and CARB emission regulations, and provide up to 8 percent better fuel economy than previous models.

The 8.1-liter PowerTech engine, introduced in the John Deere 8400 tractor in 1994, powers the Model 9100. With its in-line fuel injection and electronic governor, this engine set fuel-economy and power records in its class when the 8400 tractor was evaluated in the Nebraska Tests.



The John Deere 9000 Series Four-Wheel Drive Tractors include the 260-hp 9100. 310-hp 9200, 360-hp 9300, and 425-hp 9400. The tractors feature high-torque John Deere PowerTech™ engines, a spacious CommandView™ cab, and the control and convenience of TouchSet™ hydraulics.

Two entirely new PowerTech engines provide power for the other 9000 Series Tractors. The Model 9200 uses the 10.5 L engine and the 9300 and 9400 use 12.5 L engines. Both field-tested engines feature electronically controlled unit injectors, a high-capacity turbocharger, and a cam-in-head design with four valves per cylinder for fuel-efficient, high-torque power.

All three engines use directed top-liner cooling, a John Deere innovation, which reduces liner temperaturees by 130 degrees F for improved cylinder durability, reduced emissions, and industry-leading oil control in their power classes.

The 9000 Series Tractors feature the same CommandView™ cab that set the standard for the industry with the introduction of the 8000 Series tractors. The cab's 62 square feet of glass area enhances visibility for the operator and complements the roomy interior. A fully adjustable air-suspension seat with exclusive ride-zone protection ensures a comfortable ride all day long. New halogen infrared headlamps cast light up to 35 percent farther than regular halogens, for increased visibility during nighttime operation.

Corn Grain Approved By Japan

RESEARCH TRIANGLE PARK, N.C. — Ciba Seeds' Maximizer™ hybrid corn (Bt corn) has received a second key approval from the Japanese government, thus allowing the importation into Japan of U.S. corn that includes Ciba's transgenic corn grain.

On Sept. 27, the Japanese Ministry of Agriculture, Forestry and Fisheries (MAFF) announced that Ciba's Event 176 Bt corn (marketed as Maximizer) fully complies with Japan's guidelines for the safety assessment of animal feed produced by recombinant DNA techniques.

This announcement follows the Sept. 3 announcement by the Japanese Ministry of Health and Welfare (MHW) clearing Maximizer grain for use in human food and food additives. According to a USDA offical, "Effective immediately, Ciba's Bt corn grain may now be freely imported into Japan."

The Japanese assessments are extremely important because Japan is the world's largest buyer of U.S. export grain.

Pennsylvania DHIA Year-End Reports

For the second year in a row, the top producing herds among members of the Pennsylvania Dairy Herd Improvement Association for the year ending September were Meadow Spring Farm owned by Nelson Sensenig, in Newmanstown, for total average milk and protein production, and R.V. and S.V. Hollenshead, of Mercersburg, for highest average fat production.

The official end-of-the year tally for the 94-cow Holstein herd owned by Sensenig was an average of 33,329 pounds of milk, 1,085 pounds of fat, and 1,044 pounds of protein. They were milked three times per day.

Sensenig also had the top producing cow for protein production. His No.123 registered Holstein made 44,470 pounds of milk, 1,416 pounds of protein, and 1,033 pounds of fat in 305 days, being milked three-times-per day.

He also had the second and third place top cows for milk production — different cows.

The 145-cow herd at Hollensheads' dairy farm made 30,783 pounds of milk, 1,230 pounds of fat, and 993 pounds of protein, being milked twice per day.

The top milk-producing cow tested by Pa.DHIA was a 3-year-old registered Holstein owned by Seibert Strait, of Warfordsburg, in Fulton County. Strait's No. 1,019 cow made 52,977 pounds of milk, 668 pounds of protein, and 787 pounds of fat in 305 days, being milked twice per day.

The top fat-producing cow was a registered Holstein, No.193, owned by Star Rock Farms, in Lancaster. With a 305-day lactation started at 6-years, 4-months old, No. 193 made 44,846 pounds of milk, 1,284 pounds of protein and 2,575 pounds of fat. She was milked three times per day for 281 days during the lactation.

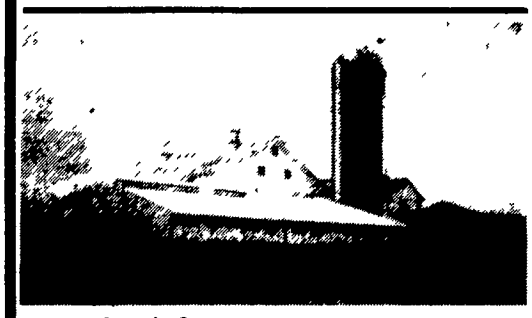
LAPP'S BARN EQUIPMENT

CURTAIN SYSTEMS



Lapp's Curtain System

Lapp's insulated curtains can help you make your farm more efficient. You can save up to 30% on your fuel/energy costs while maintaining a comfortable climate enables livestock to feed into live weight more efficiently, the curtain makes your barn warmer in winter and cooler in summer.

Our curtains are available in both 4 and 6 ply, both of which are faced with a impervious white vinyl layer which faces the elements. With all these benefits, the average payback is two years!

A lower cost alternative to the insulated curtains, are Lapp's single layer curtains. You still get all the benefits of using a high quality curtain to keep the elements outside and being able to lower the curtain to naturally ventilate in your barn.

The Best of the Best

The Wheeling 2 oz. Seal of Quality coating represents the best of the best in the Wheeling Corrugating line of premium galvanized roofing and siding. Every panel that carries the 2 ounce coating assures you are getting the toughest, the most durable, the most corrosion resistant galvanized sheet available in today's marketplace.

2oz. Seal of Quality Wheeling

Genuine Old-Time Quality

Every Wheeling 2 oz sheet is manufactured from heavy gauge steel topped with an extra thick zinc coating and formed into profiles that contribute strength and good looks Build with a Wheeling 2 oz sheet and you'll be working with the kind of durability and dependability that's been a standard in the industry for almost 100 years

The Proof is in the Process

The performance behind the Wheeling 2 oz Seal of Quality is possible because of Wheeling's patented Cook Norteman manufacturing process This technology allows a more consistent quality product and a more uniform coating with unsurpassed zinc adhesion The process takes more handling and more time but the end result is a super premium panel that has its own limited 20 year performance warranty

You Rise Up Early When You Live On A Farm.
The Chores are all waiting as you enter the barn.
Soon you will leave and go into the house, your breakfast is waiting, made by your spouse.
Now before you go out, I have something to say.
I was cleaning upstairs, the other day. Some won't go up, others just fall down, you can feel the cold air blowing all around. Look at these windows, how easy to clean, a house full of these would fulfill my dream. Why don't we call them, they look so nice there is no charge for giving a price.

That's Right, Call Sensenig Today.

Soy-Based Technology To Benefit Producers

ST. LOUIS, Mo. — More than 60 wood and adhesive industry leaders joined soybean farmers in Springfield, Ore., for the product demonstration of a new soybean-based adhesive used in gluing finger joints.

Made from U.S.-grown soybeans, the adhesive is the result of more than five years of research and development funded by the United Soybean Board (USB), the national soybean checkoff organization.

The soy-based adhesive is just one of the most recent industrial products made from this country's 2.2 billion bushel soybean crop, said Ralph Christensen, a farmer from Onawa, Iowa, and the chairman of USB's New Uses Committee. If adopted by the wood products industry, soy-based adhesives could consume 175 million bushels of soybeans (6 percent of the total crop production) per year by 2005.

The study was conducted at Technical Woods Products Inc., in Sutherlin, Ore., located 50 miles south of Eugene, Ore., by Roland Kreibich, a leading adhesive expert from Kreibich Associates of Auburn, Wash.

Kreibich's research focused on the finger joint, a zigzag-like joint that allows shorter scraps of wood to be glued together forming longer, usable lumber. The process occurs when a traditional adhesive is applied on one edge of the wood and a soy-based adhesive is applied to the other edge. When the prices are coupled, the joint bonds in seconds through a natural chemical reaction without the use of heat energy common to most finger joint processes.

"Soy-based adhesives appear to offer exceptional strength, even when using green or wet lumber," said Kreibich.

The adhesive is made of soy protein, phenolic resins and aminoplast resins and can be used with a variety of wood and wood-based products, including end-joint and assembly adhesives, decorative and structural panels and engineered wood products.

Kreibich anticipates the quick-setting bond will gain popularity with lumber mills, because it allows for more production line efficiency, cleans up with soap and water, saves energy by not using any outside energies and saves time and money compared with traditional adhesives. Soy-based adhesives also may reduce volatile organic compound, or VOC, emissions, which are believed to contribute to the formation of smog.

The soy-based adhesive's performance exceeds the minimum standards for finger joints. It can withstand tensile strength of 2,933 pounds per square inch (psi) to 5,384 psi, according to Kreibich's research.

Aside from the ingredients used, the only difference from the current adhesive process is that most mills in North America use just one adhesive applicator. With the new soy technology, a second applicator is needed because the system involves using adhesives of different compositions on separate surfaces. In mill trials this year, no alterations to the applicators themselves were necessary.

Christensen said soybean farmers are looking for ways to provide improved products for various industies while increasing demand for soybeans. Beyond the traditional markets of cooking oils and livestock feeds, industrial uses range from lubricants and inks to paints and solvents.

"We wanted to get industry leaders here so we could get more information into the hands of the people who will use and commercialize this product," said Christensen. "From the response we received today, the participants expressed their appreciation of the soybean industry for our work on this technology."

Japan Grants Feed Clearances For Bt Corn

GOLDEN VALLEY, Minn. — The Japanese Ministry of Agriculture, Food and Fisheries (MAFF) has granted livestock feed clearances for Northrup King Co. Bt corn. The clearance comes after an extensive eight-month review of the product, bringing Japanese approval to import the company's genetically modified corn one step closer.

The feed clearance comes on the heels of an earlier decision by officials at the Japanese Ministry of Health and Welfare allowing use of Bt corn in food and food additives. Environmental approval is expected soon, the final step in the Japanese approval process.

According to Northrup King President and Chief Executive Officer Ed Shonsey, the move is significant as Japan imported nearly 635 million bushels of U.S. corn last year, making it the largest customer for American corn farmers. By comparison, the 15-country European Union imported 108 million bushels of U.S. corn, one-sixth of the amount of the Japanese.

The approval by the Japanese "once again reaffirms the safety of our Bt corn and brings us one step closer to delivering this grain to U.S. export customers. New technologies such as Bt corn allow U.S. farmers to improve their productivity and meet growing worldwide demand for their products," said Ed Shonsey. "We believe that products like these, developed with the help of biotechnology, will play a vital role in feeding the world's growing population."

The Northrup King Bt corn contains a gene which enables the plant to protect itself against the European corn borer, a pest that is estimated to cost U.S. corn farmers up to $1 billion annually as a result of decreased yields. The seed is for sale in the U.S. for spring planting in 1997.

Researchers Say Beef Needs More Value To Recapture Market

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Only by giving consumers more value for their food dollar will the beef industry be able to compete with pork and poultry, a panel of beef specialists said at an international meeting here recently.

"Value is what determines market share," said Harlan Ritchie, an aninal scientist at the University of Michigan. "The benefits beef is delivering is not in line with beef prices. We're charging a relatively high price for a product without the benefits consumers want."

He made the comments to researchers, students, and industry representatives gathered for the national meeting of the American Society of Animal Science. Nearly 2,000 people attended the meeting here July 23-26.

Since 1976, as a percentage of total meat consumption, beef has seen a 32 percent decline in market share, Ritchie said. In those 20 years, the average price of beef has increased by $1.89 per pound. During the same time period, the average poultry price increased by only 84 cents. And the poultry industry has developed new products designed to fit customer lifestyles, Rithie noted.

"We need to work hard at lowering the cost of producing that product from conception to consumption," he said. "I believe there is still some slack in the system."

Larry Benyshek, head of the animal and dairy science department at the University of Georgia, said researchers can use gene maps, new statistical procedures, and biotechnology to improve efficiency.

"The key is to genetically engineer our animals to be more efficient," he said. "These tools give us some opportunities that are unique in the history of animal improvement.

"Those tools may bring improved reproduction and growth," he said. "The possibilities of what we can do with hormones alone is mind-boggling. We can also look at changing the microbes in the rumen to improve the efficiency of digestion. If we can improve digestibility by just 10 percent, we could enhance production significantly."

Ritchie also said the industry needs to improve the quality and consistency of its products. "Consumers want a product that is tender and of uniform size and fat content every time," he said.

New product development will also be a key to improving market share. That's a strategy taken directly from the play books of the pork and poultry industries.

"Products need to be convenient to prepare in 15 minutes. They need to be available in the right portion size and fit in with pre-packaged complete meals," he said. "Those products need to come with very clear and complete cooking instructions."

Ritchie and Benyshek agreed that those developments probably won't come from meat packers and retailers. "And time is our biggest enemy," Ritchie said. "The longer it takes for these developments, the more ground we have to make up."

Ritchie predicts that a new industry may spring up to take meat cuts from packers and process them into ready-to-use convenient products for consumers. He also acknowledged that USDA and university researchers would need to lay the groundwork for those new industries and their products.

The beef industry is focusing its efforts on improving efficiency and its products. Jim Gibb, head of the National Cattleman's Beef Association's Center for Quality, said the association places an emphasis on those areas in its long range plan.

"That plan guides how we use our resources for research," Gibb said. "Improving quality and consistency and production efficiency are key elements of that plan."

The plan was developed based on extensive input from producers, meat industry representatives, researchers, marketers, and consumers, Gibb said.

Manbeck Named Distinguished Professor

UNIVERSITY PARK (Centre Co.) — Dr. Harvey Manbeck, professor and interim head of Penn State's agricultural and biological engineering department, has been named distinguished professor of agricultural and biological engineering by the university.

The title of distinguished professor was established by the office of the president to recognize a select group of professors with exceptional accomplishments in teaching, research, and service.

Manbeck was nominated for the honor by his colleagues and by Dr. James Starling, past interim dean, and Dr. Theodore Alter, interim dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences.

Manbeck's undergraduate and graduate teaching has been recognized with the Penn State Engineering Society's Premier Teaching Award in 1990 and Penn State's George Atherton Excellence in Teaching Award in 1991. Manbeck serves as faculty adviser to about 25 undergraduate students and seven graduate students per year, and also has served as adviser to several student organizations.

A leader in wood engineering research and design, his work has contributed significantly to the advancement of design of post-frame buildings and hardwood timber bridges and to the development of structural and wood production systems. He leads the structural system effort in Penn State's Housing Research Center and served as the center's interim director in 1995.

With co-investigators from the School of Forest Resources and the Department of Civil Engineering, Manbeck initiated research to develop structural glued-laminated products from undervalued and underutilized Pennsylvania hardwoods.

The research team developed design standards for hardwood glued-laminated highway bridges. Several full-scale timber bridges have been built based on the research results and design specifications.

A recognized authority on poultry housing, Manbeck currently is editing a national extension publication on poultry housing and equipment.

He also helped establish Penn State's Particulate Materials Center and contributes to a cooperative Penn State research effort to define the mechanical behavior of powders, granules and other particulates. His work has provided a clearer understanding of the interaction betwee bin walls and stored grains and powders.

Manbeck is a member of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE), the American Society of Civil Engineers, the Forest Products Research Society, Sigma Xi and Gamma Sigma Delta, the national honorary agriculture fraternity.

He has received national and international research awards, including the Henry Geise Structures and Environment Award in 1990 and the National Frame Builder's Association Bernon Perkins Award in 1990. He was named a Fellow of ASAE in 1992.

He has served on the Faculty Senate at Penn State for many years, and chaired the Senate Committee on Research for the past three years.

Manbeck was an assistant and associate professor in the Department of Agricultural Engineering at the University of Georgia prior to joining the Penn State facultry as professor in 1980. From 1975 to 1977 he was an associate professor and extension agricultural engineer at Ohio State University.

He earned his bachelor's and master's in agricultural engineering from Penn State in 1963 and 1965, respectively, and received his doctorate in agricultural engineering from Oklahoma State University in 1970.

Processors Seek Administration's Support

WASHINGTON, D.C. — "Without the ability to ship in interstate commerce, I will likely not survive another six months," an Oklahoma beef jerky processor told U.S. Secretary of Agriculture Dan Glickman recently.

"We have had to turn down two large contracts because of this restriction — the QVC Home Shopping Network and Remain Publications' Christmas catalog. The QVC network reaches millions of people. Remain Publications publishes 15 different magazines which also reach millions of people. Having to turn down these two offers constituted a major loss of revenue," Charolette "Charlee" Haley, owner of Charlee's Gourmet Beef Jerky of Bokoshe, Okla. said.

"If allowed to operate in interstate commerce since the beginning of my operations, my volume of sales would have allowed me to be debt free at this point," said Lori Robbins, owner of Home on the Range and Company, a beef and buffalo jerky operation in Scott City, Kan.

"I have lost between $25,000 and $30,000 per year in sales due to not having complete exposure since the start of operations three years ago," the Kansas small businesswoman and mother told the secretary.

Haley and Robbins were joined by other small- and mid-size meat processors and a delegation of state officials seeking the administration's support of pending legislation to end the nearly 30-year-old ban on the interstate shipment of state-inspected meat and poultry products.

The restriction affects approximately 3,000 slaughtering and processing facilities in 26 states that offer state meat and poultry inspection programs. The Federal Meat Inspection Act of 1967 and the Poultry Products Inspection Act of 1968, which established state meat and poultry inspection, require inspection programs administered by the states to be "at least equal to" the inspection standards of the USDA's Food Safety Inspection Service (FSIS). The same laws, however, prevent the interstate shipment of the state-inspected product while allowing foreign-inspected product to be shipped anywhere in the United States.

"If I were able to ship my products in interstate commerce, I estimate an increase of $30,000 per week in poultry sales alone accumulating to $1.5 million per year," Adam Nixon, owner of Blue Chip Meats, Inc. of Cincinnati, Ohio said. "Along with the increase in sales there would be a natural increase in the amount of employees needed to operate our business, meaning an additional eight to 10 jobs created." He said that increased volume would also provide him an opportunity to reduce input costs by buying raw product at an estimated 10 percent discount, saving Blue Chip Meats an additional $100,000 per year.

Mike Monson, a minority businessman from LaGrange, Ind. told the secretary that the cost of moving to federal inspection was prohibitive. "We have labels on 129 different products. At an average cost of $300 per label to change the label, the cost would $38,700," the part owner of Mishler Packing said. "In addition to label approvals, the cost of restocking labels not usable in transition would be $23,000, including our inventory of preprinted bags. That comes to a total of $61,700."

"Small processors have been an important part of rural communities for decades," said Jim Hankes, owner of Thrushwood Farm Quality Meats, Inc. of Galesburg, Ill. Hankes told the secretary that the Galesburg Area Chamber of Commerce has said that according to U.S. Department of Commerce statistics, every one dollar of retail sales generates $2.42 in rural economic activity, and every $1 million of sales creates 49 new jobs.

Companion legislation has been introduced in the United States Congress to repeal the unfair prohibition. In the senate, Senators Larry Pressler (R-SD) and Orrin G. Hatch (R-UT) have introduced S. 1862 while Representative William "Mac" Thornberry (R-TX) introduced H.R. 3750 in the House of Representatives.

The bills do not automatically lift the ban for all certified state meat and poultry inspections. The bills would require each state to petition the secretary of agriculture for the change. The measures would also allow federal inspectors to randomly inspect state-inspected plants in addition to the state inspections.

World Trade Should Set Research Agenda

RAPID CITY, S.D. — Booming growth in the world's population and new world trade agreements mean the livestock industry may need to adjust its research priorites, according to a Georgia animal scientist.

"In the next 20 years or so, plant genetics and production practices may not be able to continue to keep ahead of the world's population growth," said Larry Benyshek, head of the University of Georgia's animal and dairy science department. "Projections indicate that in 20 years the world's food production will need to double. That means the grain we feed to livestock may be needed for human consumption."

Benyshek made the comments during a symposium on the future of the beef industry at the national meeting of the American Society of Animal Science in Rapid City, July 23-26. Nearly 2,000 researchers, students, and industry representatives attended the meeting.

Benyshek said those projections indicate that researchers should be concentrating on improving livestock production using forages and other products that aren't readily digestible by humans.

Additional research should focus on making livestock more efficient, he said. That will have two benefits: freeing up more resources for human use, and reducing costs to improve profits for producers.

"We're living in a changing world in terms of the kind of trade and trade agreements that are being put in place," he said. "To be competitive our producers will need to be the world's low-cost producers of meat."

Benyshek said new technology such as gene mapping, gene transfer and other advantages will help researchers address those concerns. Researchers may also be able to genetically manipulate the microbes in the rumen, the first of a cow's four stomachs, to make them more efficient at digesting forages.

"Once we know the genetic make up of livestock and the microbes in the rumen, we can genetically engineer animals and microbes to meet those needs," he said.

KUBOTA'S HIGH EFFICIENCY, LOW NOISE TRACTOR

Kubota's new B2400 (24 HP) multi-functional tractor is extremely versatile and efficient, yet quietly powerful. Equipped with Kubota's new E-TVCS 3-cylinder, liquid-cooled low emissions - "low noise" engine and an enclosed muffler and enclosed exhaust pipe.
Available in both 2WD and 4WD, a hydrostatic transmission - single pedal control of tractor speed and direction with no clutch, and Kubota's Bi-Speed Turn (reducing front wheel resistance) is optional.
Power steering, mid- and rear-PTO, operator comfort features, Kubota's performace-matched loaders and a line of heavy-duty implements enhance production and efficiency.

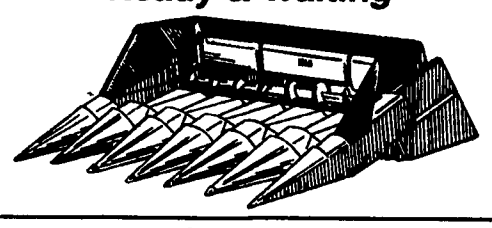
Genuine Case IH Combine Parts

Give You a Head Start on Harvest!

Keep Cutting with Sta-Sharp™ and Super Sta-Sharp™ Sections

These self-sharpening sections deliver cleaner cutting and extra long life. Super Sta-Sharp sections feature a special course tooth profile and extra wear control.

Keep Your Nose Straight Corn Head Nose Cone Ready & Waiting



Keep Your Corn Head Far Ahead

Imitation parts just don't cut it. Only genuine Case IH corn head parts provide the fit and performance your combine requires.
Drive sprockets – made from high-strength, wear-resistant ductile iron.
Gatherer chain – provides far greater wear than imported "look-alikes."
Extended-life gatherer chain – chrome-plated pins and heavy-duty design wears 2.5 times longer than our standard chain.
Corn head knives – hard-faced with extra-thick tungsten carbide coating to stay sharp and last longer.
And be sure to replace worn corn head sprockets which may damage new chains.

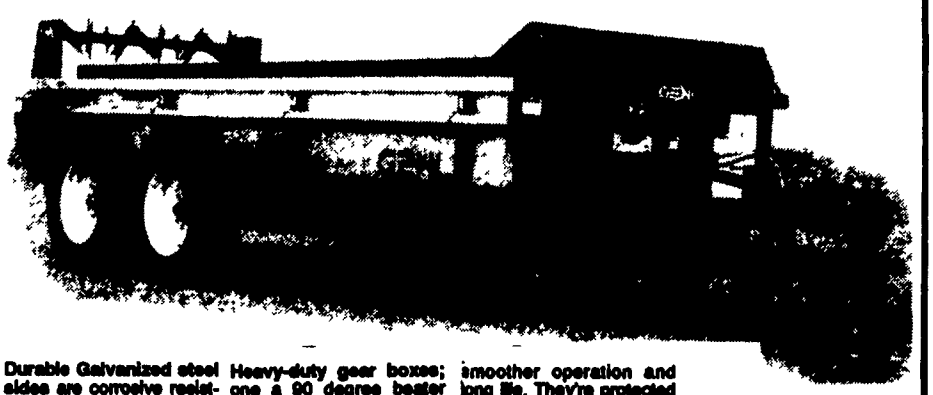
Binkley & Hurst Is Ready To Deliver A Quality Spreader To You

Tandem Axle 325 Box Spreader With Poly Floor For Better Slide & Less Freeze Fast



Low profile design means easy loading by skid loader, front end loader or barn cleaner.

Splashguards and side rails increase the heaped bushel rating by 14% while protecting spreader sides and keeping sloppy loads off the roads.

Durable Galvanized steel sides are corrosive resistant for long life. One-piece seamless construction won't catch material or leak.

Heavy-duty gear boxes; one a 90 degree beater drive, the other a two-speed worm box with bronze gear and steel worm, provide efficient power transmission, smoother operation and long life. They're protected by a polyethylene shield that won't rust or dent.

Hydraulic apron drive option provides infinite unloading speeds to match any load, ground speed or application rate requirements. It's available on the four largest models. Conveyor slats are made from 1/4" high-strength rail-steel.

Full length, sturdy A-frame hitch (7-guage steel on MS135/175/250 and 3/16" steel on MS325/425) ties directly to the axle for extra strength and durability. Because the load is carried and not pulled, the weight of the load and its associated stress is more evenly distributed across a broader base.

CASE IH

CASE IH 2100 Series Axial Flow Combines

DO IT!

WITH DEPENDABILITY

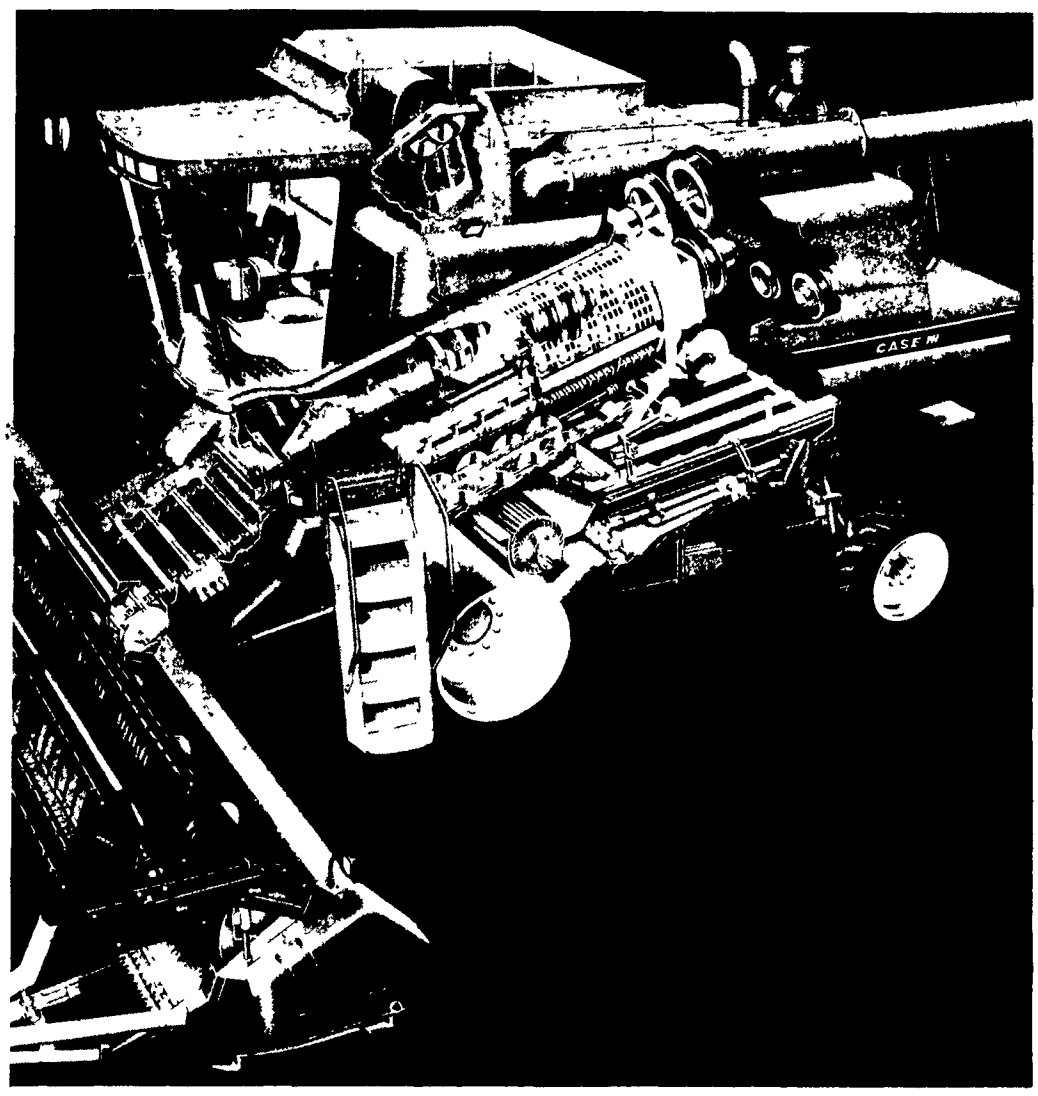
... Moving when the grain and weather conditions are fit: that is what the CASE IH Axial Flow combines do. And they are built tough to last. Many are running over 5,000 hours. How long will an Axial Flow last? We do not know yet.

WITH RELIABILITY

... Compared to conventional or other style Rotary combines, the Axial Flow puts more premium quality grain in the tank and leaves less grain in the field. Why else do most all growers of food quality corn own CASE IH Axial Flow Combines?

WITH COMFORT

... The new cab on the 2100 Series makes your long days seem shorter, because the controls you use most are on the HYDRO-PROPULSION Lever which is attached to the seat. You have less operator stress - therefore, more personal productivity per day.



WITH A COMBINE DEALER

... C. B. HOOBER & SON INC. HAS SPECIALIZED IN COMBINES SALES AND SERVICE SINCE THE AXIAL FLOW WAS INTRODUCED IN 1977. (7) HOOBER SERVICEMEN ARE FACTORY TRAINED TO WORK ON AXIAL FLOW COMBINES YEAR ROUND - NOT JUST DURING COMBINE SEASON. AND OUR MECHANICS SERVICE OVER 375 AXIAL FLOW COMBINES. CAN YOU GET THAT KIND OF SUPPORT ANYWHERE ELSE?

Get the Advantage of the Unbeatable COMBINE COMBINATION: The CASE IH Axial Flow Combine and HOOBER Service.

Flexibility is the key to staying productive. And that's exactly what you'll find with the AGCO® Allis 5660 utility tractor.

The Key To Effective Middle Management.

In fact, this mid-range tractor has a 55 PTO hp engine that offers you the ultimate in maneuverability. Its low height and low center of gravity make this the ideal tractor for working inside buildings and other confined work areas. And because the platform is low to the ground, it's easy to get on and off the tractor

- The synchromesh transmission has 12 forward and 12 reverse speed choices, with synchronized shifting in four gears and a synchronized forward/reverse shuttle.
- These directional changes help to reduce loader and rear blade cycle times
- The AWD models feature a true centerline drive shaft for more efficient power transfer and less maintenance
- As always, behind every AGCO Allis tractor lies a 4-year/4,000-hour warranty that's backed by your dealer.

To get a closer look at the 5660, stop by and see us We'll be happy to show you the way to higher productivity.

NEW MAXEMERGE® PLUS PLANTERS

PUT THE INDUSTRY'S TOUGHEST ROW UNITS TO WORK IN YOUR TOUGHEST CONDITIONS

Stronger mount and heavier-duty down-force system tackle no-till fields
- Welded mount maintains row-unit position
- Apply as much as 400 pounds of down-force per row to penetrate tough conditions

Cast closing-wheel arm and staggered closing wheels take on heavy trash
- Cast arm maintains alignment over the furrow
- Stagger the closing wheels for better trash flow

Introducing the all-new MaxEmerge Plus Planters. With over a dozen improvements, these planters have no equal in strength, convenience, and accuracy.

A stronger frame mounting bracket keeps each row unit in place. A reinforced shank provides unyielding strength on rolling ground and tough soils.

The cast closing-wheel arm keeps a more consistent alignment over the furrow. And you can stagger closing wheels for better trash flow.

Stop by our dealership today and see for yourself why MaxEmerge Plus Planters are the new equation for planting success.

GOOD DEALS...AND A GOOD DEAL MORE

The new generation of Belarus. For a new generation of farmers.

Exceptional value. That's what cost conscious farmers expect from hardworking Belarus tractors. But after twenty years we feel it's time for a change. So we've updated the features and styling of our new 8000 and 9000 Series while keeping everything that makes Belarus so dependable.

Belarus Tractors From 22 HP To 100 HP

Take our new synchromesh transmission for example. It offers 14 forward and 4 reverse speeds for easy to shift power. Plus an improved turning radius provides greater maneuverability for a whole range of applications.

See your local Belarus dealer for a test drive and see for yourself.
